P
Univ
H

Harvard College

CLASS OF 1870

SECRETARY'S REPORT

No. 7

1900

Class Committee

AMORY APPLETON LAWRENCE.
WALTER THAXTER WINSOR.
WILLIAM WARREN VAUGHAN.

THOMAS BALDWIN TICKNOR,
Class Secretary.

P
Univ
H

THE

SEVENTH REPORT

(OF THE

SECRETARY)

OF THE

CLASS OF 1870

OF

HARVARD COLLEGE

3486.9
4.4. 38.

CAMBRIDGE
Printed at The Riverside Press
1900

NOTE.

The asterisk (*) is used to mark the names of deceased members.

The names of members who have adopted the ministry as their profession are printed in italics.

REPORT.

I HAD hoped, in preparing the seventh Class Report, to have somewhat broadened its scope, and by obtaining fuller replies to my inquiries to have included something more than the brief statistics which form so large a portion of the sketches. The fault is doubtless mine, for not having more clearly stated my wishes in my circular in relation to the Report. In a few cases replies have been received which are particularly interesting and complete, and which I hope may serve as models for the next Report.

As the years go by, and our numbers grow smaller, we should draw nearer together, and the Report which brings to us news of each other should be as full and as personal in its character as it is possible to make it.

No word has come to me from Ames, Chapman, Greener, Jordan, Morison, Peele, J. Sargent, Seavey, or Stone, and therefore in their cases I have been obliged to reprint the matter contained in the previous Report.

The Class will be interested to learn that Gannett, who was with us until the close of the Junior year, has, upon the petition of a number of the members, received from the College his degree of A. B., and is therefore once more upon our rolls.

It is with deep sorrow that I have to report the deaths of George Huntington Adams, Henry Chandler Andrews, Newton Dexter, and Charles Lucius Mitchell. The customary sketches of their lives have been prepared and printed in the Report.

The usual statistical tables and statement of the Class Fund will be found in their appropriate places.

THOMAS B. TICKNOR,

Class Secretary.

18 HIGHLAND STREET, CAMBRIDGE, June 15, 1900.

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2008 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

http://www.archive.org/details/n07reportclass1870harvuoft

MEMBERS OF THE CLASS.

Brooks Adams.
*George Huntington Adams. *1900.
Walter Adams.
William Pomeroy Alexander.
Angier Ames.
*Henry Chandler Andrews, LL. B. *1899.
*Samuel Emmons Brown. *1877.
William Bradley Buckminster.
George Wadley Bunton.
Arthur Burnham.
William Wigglesworth Chamberlin.
Frederic Wilcox Chapin, M. D.
Nelson Charles Chapman.
Henry Lincoln Clapp.
Zorester Bennett Coes.
John Hanun Cole, LL. B.
*William Sage Crosby, M. D., M. M. S. S. *1875.
Laurence Curtis.
Louis Curtis.
Rest Fenner Curtis.
Louis Thomas Cushing, LL. B.
Arthur Hamilton Cutler, Ph. D.
*Frank Du Pont Davis. *1879.
Walter Deane.
*Newton Dexter. *1899.
Alexander James Dallas Dixon.
John Dixwell, M. D., M. M. S. S.
William Walter Dodge, LL. B.
Charles Acton Drew.
Edward Dudley.
John Francis Dwight.
Charles Crooke Emott, LL. B.
*Andrew Otis Evans, LL. B. *1879.
Benjamin Marvin Fernald.
George Harrison Fisher.
Andrew Fitz.
Laurens Norris Francis.
Theodore Frothingham.
Frederic Timothy Fuller.
James Buchanan Galloway.
Thomas Brattle Gannett.
*Frederic William Godon, M.D. *1876.
*Samuel Fay Greene. *1877.
Richard Theodore Greener, LL. B., LL. D.
Herman John Groesbeck, M. D., L. R. C. S.
William Gardner Hale, LL. D.
*Joseph Healy, LL. B. *1880.
John Edwin Hill.
*Thomas Leslie Hinckley. *1875.
Charles Emerson Hoar.
Artemas Henry Holmes.
Raymond Fletcher Holway, B. D.
*Henry Kenney Horton. *1887.
William Going Hosea, LL. B.
Arthur Lord Huntington, LL. B.
Leonard Huntress, M. D., M. M. S. S.
James Clark Jordan.
Charles Willard Kettell, S. B.
Frederic Kidder.
Babson Savilian Ladd.
Amory Appleton Lawrence.
Waldo Lincoln.
George Sherman Littlefield.
*Fred Wadsworth Loring. *1871.
*Ethelbert Mills Low. *1881.
*Perceval Lowell. *1887.
Horace Gray Lunt.
*Harry Wilcocks McCall. *1894.
Charles Barnsley McMichael.
Benjamin Pickman Mann.
*William Merrick. *1887.
*Charles Lucius Mitchell. *1898.
Charles Monroe.
Ernest Nathaniel Morison.

Godfrey Morse, LL. B.
Otis Norcross, LL. B.
Franklin Nourse.
Charles Freeman Nye.
Henry Parkman, LL. B., A. M.
Samuel Longstreth Parrish.
Theophilus Parsons.
George Pearson.
Willard Silsbee Peele.
Frank Key Pendleton, LL. B.
*James Handasyd Perkins, LL. B. *1889.
Willard Taylor Perrin, B. D., Ph. D.
Edward Rawson.
James Rogers Rich.
Frank Walcott Robinson.
Otis Granville Robinson.
Alfred Rodman, LL. B.
Thomas Morgan Rotch, M. D., M. M. S. S.
John White Sanger.
Joseph Sargent.
*Lucius Manlius Sargent, LL. B. *1893.
Winthrop Saltonstall Scudder.
Oscar Fitz Seavey.
Chauncey Cooley Sheldon, M. D., M.M. S. S.
Walter Shepard, S. B.
Barker Baker Sherman.
Sanford Sidney Smith, LL. B.
Walter Bugbee Smith.
James Russell Soley.
Richard Herman Soule, S. B. M. E.
William Master Spackman.
*Charles Parker Spalding, M.D., M.M. S. S. *1895.
Henry Kittredge Spaulding, LL. B.
Richard Henry Stone, LL. B.
*Roger Williams Swaim. *1872.
Charles Herbert Swan.
Stephen Swift Taft.
*Stephen Van Rensselaer Thayer. *1871.
Thomas Baldwin Ticknor.
Alfred Tuckerman, Ph. D. et A. M.
William Warren Vaughan, LL.B., A.M.
Frederic Henry Viaux.
William Austin Wadsworth.
Lucien Augustus Wait, Assoc. Prof. Math. Corn. Univ.
Charles Hosmer Walcott.
Benjamin Marston Watson.
Henry Wells.
Melville Moore Weston, LL. B.
William Fisher Wharton, LL. B.
John Stuart White, LL. D.
Charles Bowditch Wilby, LL. B.
Grinnell Willis.
Walter Thaxter Winsor.
Roger Wolcott, LL. B., S. H. S., LL. D.
Charles Fuller Woodard, LL. B.
Francis Jesse Worcester, LL. B.
James Bosley Noel Wyatt.
*23+108 = 131.

MEMBERS DURING A PORTION OF THE COURSE.

George Ashton Badger.
*Joseph Barrett.
*George Gilman Chapin.
Ellwood Harvey Darlington.
Elbridge Miner Eaton.
Willis Farrington.
Benjamin Hodges.
Francis Mason Learned.
Gardiner Felch McCandless.
John Robert McLean.
James McManus.
Joseph Parker Mason.
Harry Frank Newhall.
William Fisher Packer.
*Christopher A. Thompson.
Edward Davis Washburn.
Judson Boardman Wilds.
17.

CLASS OF 1870.

ADAMS, BROOKS. After graduation studied law (one year at the Harvard Law School), and was admitted to the bar April 10, 1873. Practises in Boston, with office at 23 Court Street. Is the author of "The Emancipation of Massachusetts" and "The Law of Civilization and Decay," they being published in French also; besides these books he has printed numerous articles in various periodicals and in pamphlet form, among which are "The Gold Standard" (1894); "The Spanish War and the Equilibrium of the World" (The Forum, August, 1898); "The New Struggle for Life among Nations" (McClure, April, 1899); "England's Decadence in the West Indies" (The Forum, June, 1899); "Natural Selection in Literature" (The Anglo-Saxon, September, 1899). Was married to Evelyn Favis, September 7, 1889. Residence, Quincy.

*ADAMS, GEORGE H. Was born in Boston, Jan. 14, 1846. His parents were Rev. Charles Adams, a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Sarah Emery (Parker) Adams. He prepared for Harvard at Illinois College, Jacksonville, Ill., remaining there through its freshman year. In July, 1863, he entered the army as 1st lieutenant in the 4th U. S. Colored Heavy Artillery, serving on the Mississippi River, in Kentucky, Tennessee, and Arkansas; was mustered out in February, 1866, as captain, with the brevet rank of major, U. S. Volunteers.

He entered College with the Class in 1866.

"After graduation was master at De Veaux College one year; at the Harvard Law School, and proctor at the College, one year; then continued the study of the law in New York until May, 1874, when he was admitted to the bar; from Jan. 1, 1875, to April 30, 1877, practised with Richard H. Huntley, Esq., under the firm name of Huntley & Adams; on May 1, 1877, formed a partnership with Artemas H. Holmes ('70), firm of Holmes & Adams. During the year 1884 was assistant district attorney for the city and county of New York with District Attorney Peter B. Olney, of the Class of 1864. Was one of the board of managers of the Harvard Club of New York and treasurer of the New York Law Institute; served a term as member and secretary of the executive committee of the New York Bar Association; was a member of the University Club in New York and one of its committee on admissions. On April 26, 1877, was married to Miss E. Augusta Holmes, of New York. On Nov. 3, 1879, Huntington Adams was born; on Dec. 21, 1881, Lawrence Holmes Adams (deceased); and on Sept. 6, 1888, Constance Adams. In 1896 Holmes & Adams dissolved and Mr. Adams formed a law partnership with Frederick H. Allen ('80), which continued until his death. Huntington Adams is a member of the Class of 1901."

The paragraph quoted above was prepared by Adams and by him sent to the secretary for insertion in the Class Record of 1900, shortly before April 7, 1900, a Saturday. On that day Adams seemed to be in his usual health, which was uncommonly good; transacted some business matters outside his office; met several of his intimates, — his old friend James S. McCobb of '71, among others, to whom, and to the others, he seemed quite as usual; and remained late at his office desk. On his way home, in a Madison Avenue car near 42d Street at about six o'clock, he appeared to have fainted, fellow passengers attended him and at 45th Street removed him to the Railroad Club, learned his identity from the contents of his pocket-book, summoned the Flower Hospital by telephone, where he was taken very promptly by ambulance, and his wife notified, and his brother-in-law, Holmes ('70). He had the most prompt and best of medical treatment, but did not recover consciousness, and died at noon the following day of the stroke of apoplexy, the result of no special inducing cause, but of the gradual deterioration of brain tissues until the point of lesion was reached.

Adams possessed in a large degree the capacity of endearing himself to his associates and companions; in College he continuously received those evidences of popularity which are only accorded to general favorites, being one of the first elected to the Institute, the Dickey, the A. D., the Hasty Pudding (of which he was treasurer), and the Porcellian; he was also a member of the Med. Fac., the Harvard Natural History Society, and the Glee Club; was chairman of the Mock Parts Committee, chief marshal at the political celebration of the election of General Grant, a marshal at the inauguration of President Eliot, and second marshal on Class Day. He rowed in Class Races in the Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior years, first as stroke oar of the second crew, and afterwards on the first crew.

In his later career he met with the like cordial recognition which kindliness and good fellowship alone insure, and in the Association of the Bar, the Law Institute, in the Harvard, the University and other clubs, he was prominent as an officer or committeeman; and at the bar and with the courts he was highly regarded and, so far as known, without an enemy.

In his profession he was highly successful, due to unceasing industry, zeal, and the best qualities of an advocate; his ability to master and excel was general, not that of a specialist; and in the different branches of the law he was equally competent. He enjoyed in a high degree the confidence and warm friendship of his clients.

In his private life one characteristic was conspicuous, — he had a most agreeable capacity for enjoyment, not only of a present occasion, but in anticipation and in reminiscence as well; the result of a kindly, hearty, warm-hearted disposition. While his temperament was neither jovial, gay, nor frivolous, his companionship brought sunshine, not shadow; hopefulness, not depression. Another characteristic was conspicuous by its absence; he rarely expressed harsh, uncharitable, or unkind sentiments of men or things.

A host of friends will unite in his Requiescat.

ADAMS, WALTER. Began the study of law in July, 1870, in the office of his father (C. S. Adams), Framingham, Mass.; in October, 1872, entered the office of H. W. Paine & R. D. Smith, Boston; at present is practising in Framingham. Represented the 28th Middlesex district in the General Courts of 1894 and 1896. Was married, May 25, 1885, at West River, Md., to Constance Winchester, daughter of the late Rev. Thomas Weld Winchester, of the Episcopal Church.

ALEXANDER, WILLIAM P. After travelling abroad, returned to Springfield, Mass., where he engaged in the banking business, and was United States Collector for the East Hampden District; during the years 1876–78 was aide-de-camp on the staff of Governor Rice of Massachusetts, with the rank of colonel. In May, 1887, moved to New York, where he now resides. On Jan. 3, 1877, was married to Elizabeth F. D. Stebbins, of Springfield. He has four children, — Anne Elizabeth Alexander, born Sept. 3, 1877; William Henry Alexander, born Feb. 19, 1879; Julia Standish Alexander, born Nov. 2, 1881; and Pauline Gladys Alexander, born Dec. 12, 1890. Anne E. Alexander, his eldest daughter, was married Oct. 25, 1899, to the Rev. George H. Harris, Rector of St. Stephen's Church, Wyandotte, Mich. Residence, 436 Central Park, West. Office, 346 Broadway, New York City.

AMES, ANGIER. After graduation, returned to St. Paul, Minn., where he resides. [From last Report. No reply received.]

*ANDREWS, HENRY CHANDLER. Was born in New York City, April 10, 1846, and entered College with the Class. After graduation he taught school in Boston and New York two years, and passed one year in the law office of Anderson & Young in New York; while in the latter city was a member of the Columbia Law School, from which he received the degree of LL. B.; was admitted to the bar June, 1873; became assistant to the attorney of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad in New York; then was managing clerk for Wingate & Cullen. Since 1882 he had practised law by himself, with a decided taste for patent law, but with valuable connections with enterprises such as the telephone litigations and important gas cases; he had thus gained a well-earned position of prominence at the New York bar. His love of music, which made him the Class Chorister, never deserted him, and he had collected a valuable and interesting library, very rich in musical works and scores. That rare good-humor and peculiar wit which characterized him never left him, even when he knew that his days were numbered. In his death the Class has lost one of its brightest intellects and most lovable characters. From his father he inherited a love of music that in his latter years became an absorbing passion, and the study of the great masterpieces of musical literature, through their public productions in concerts and operas, and by his own reading of the scores, became the great enjoyment of his life. Through his mother he inherited the sound business sagacity of a line of New England ancestors, which, united with his mathematical and logical cast of mind, made him an excellent and successful counsellor in the patent law to which he chiefly devoted his talents. He was never married, but lived for his books, his music, and his friends, and the nature of his tastes seemed to be amply sufficient to prevent the self-concentration and acidity of temper that frequently grows upon men who live much alone. He died Aug. 20, 1897, at the home of his cousin, Parker C. Chandler, Weymouth, Mass., from a disease of the heart from which he had been a sufferer for some years, and lies buried at New Gloucester, Me., in the Chandler family lot. In the case of most of our friends who pass away, they go wholly out of our lives, unless some extraordinary event occurs to stimulate memory, but with Andrews it is quite different. His peculiarly delightful temperament and characteristics made him so unlike others that his place is not filled. He had a quaintness of humor that made his companionship especially delightful and which, joined with his genial nature, modesty, and intelligence, endeared him to a large circle of friends. One of them who knew him well in his last years writes as follows: —

"His charming temperament, his inimitable quaintness of mind, his delicacy and sensitiveness, were not impaired by aging. I think that the last dinner I had with him at the University Club, not more than three months before his death, was perhaps the very most enjoyable of all its long series of predecessors. The enjoyment was all due, as usual, to the inexpressible and unique charm of his nature.

"No man ever combined so many delightful qualities of mind and character. He was artistic, intellectual, scientific, philosophical, inimitably droll, witty, sympathetic, tender-hearted, courageous, unselfish, and there were other ingredients equally good in his character; and the distribution, proportion, and blend of them rendered his society the best, most refreshing, and most charming tonic.

"As might be expected, he was an ardent sportsman, fond of the woods, of all natural beauty and sport, just as he was of every other really good thing. I had him twice in my camp in the Adirondacks, where his title of 'Bishop' originated.

"He had shaved off his beard and mustache that morning, at Utica, and on the way we fell in with a number of people going to 'camp-meeting,' who on observing that ample, smooth, beneficent face would not have it otherwise than that he was some light of their denomination from the West.

"He did not, as you may imagine, undeceive them, but he went to our 'camp,' instead of theirs, and much good, spiritual cheer did the 'Bishop,' provide for us during our stay."

This letter sums up the many-sided and lovable character of our dead classmate better than I could write it, and so I have quoted it freely.

Another appreciative friend writes as follows: —

"You ask me to tell you something about Henry's musical tastes and the spiritual side of his life.

"I will do the best I can, but I am afraid it will fall short of putting his wonderfully beautiful character in its true light.

"His love for music was not 'a thing apart,' it was his 'whole existence;' out of it he got his rest and recreation, and I think most of the pleasure of his life. I think orchestral music gave him the most delight. The men were personal friends to him. He knew their names and watched their advancement from one position to another with unusual interest, and I have often thought if those men had known the interest he took in them, how encouraged they would have been, and how many efforts they might have put forth for his sake.

"Chamber music shared with the orchestra largely in his interest. There was nothing in that line that he did n't hear. It seemed to me that in later years he became almost a student. He rarely went anywhere without the score, and noted every word, or tone, or note. I can never forget his delight at the first performance of the 'Meistersinger.' 'Oh!' said he, 'there is material enough in this for three operas.' Then later on when he listened to the music of the 'Ring,' there was no bound to his interest. He studied it as if it were his life, and he gained from it a pleasure far beyond what words can say. In its line 'Tristan und Isolde' was his favorite opera. He never missed an opportunity of hearing it. As I remember it he considered Mozart as the King of Melody. He was always looking toward something greater, and the new symphonies, such as 'In the New World,' and the last ever written by Tschaikowski, had especial interest for him. He wanted to become immensely rich so that he might open a concert hall, where the public could hear over and over again some good, elevating music, and become familiar with it, and learn to like it. He had no love for the street music, but I noted that he always changed his step in order to keep time to the tune. I remember when the 25th anniversary of your Class took place he was selected to arrange the musical programme. He said, in the most modest kind of a way, 'I don't see why they selected me for that.' But I did see and told him so.

"His ambition seemed to be to obtain the highest possible knowledge of music, and every energy was bent in that direction. He only cared for the highest and noblest in music, as he did in art, and in everything in life. To me in this he seemed to live on a different plane from most men.

"It is difficult to write about the spiritual side of his life. I think that side was so entirely and intensely his own, that it was like a holy secret, and very rarely one caught a glimpse of it.

"His family, I understand, were Swedenborgians, but Henry always thoroughly investigated all things and thought them out for himself and lived his life accordingly.

"He was too noble and broad in his views and ideas to be confined within the limits of any one school or class. I consider him to have been the embodiment of Faith, Hope, and Charity. With him 'all kind things were done on their own account and for their own sake, without the least reference to any gratitude.'

"When you consider that for months and years he walked with Death as his constant companion day and night, and yet never by word or look gave any sign, you must know that there was an abiding faith in something, far greater than I am capable of understanding, that possessed and sustained him. Several years ago he told me 'it was his heart.' I thought otherwise and suggested dyspepsia. 'Oh, no,' he said. 'The best doctors in New York can't all be mistaken' — and then we never talked about the subject again.

"Another time I did n't like to walk under a scaffold which seemed not quite safe. 'What matter,' he said, 'you can die but once.' The good he did, the ennobling influence of his life, is far-reaching. It was a liberal education to have known him, and to have enjoyed his friendship and regard."

During the last summer of Andrews's life the disease made such progress that he knew his days were numbered.

He went to the home of his cousin at Weymouth, who writes the following details of his last illness: —

"He arrived in Boston about eight weeks ago, in a very weak condition, and stated that there was no home that he cared for more than mine and that he had come there to die. It was evident that he was quite ill, but the doctor thought that with proper care he might get into condition to return to New York, and while necessarily an invalid, yet might have considerable of life left to him. After careful nursing for several weeks he was apparently in much better condition, and on the morning of his death, after seeing a physician, went out for a drive with me, and on his return sat down in his chair to read the newspaper. I left for Boston and an hour afterwards was informed by telephone that he had been found dead in his chair, where he quietly entered upon the sleep that knows no awakening.

"So unexpected a death always brings with it a shock to those of us who remain on guard on this side of the river, but such a passing away is so little of a shock to the deceased that it has its compensation in the feeling that the inevitable came in a most kindly manner, for dissolution was inevitable within a few months which would probably have been a period of suffering for our friend.

"It was escaped by his sudden 'taking off,' of which he must have been unconscious. I know that it was the way which he preferred, and it is a consolation to me that the last weeks of his life were spent in comparative ease of body and comfort of mind, and daily exhibitions of that quaint humor and kindliness which endeared him to all his friends, so many of whom have written to me tender words of regret for the loss of a friend who will be most sincerely missed by all who knew him."

*BROWN, SAMUEL EMMONS. Was born at Portland, Me., Feb. 27, 1847 ; his parents were Rev. Samuel E. and Elvira Latham (Small) Brown. During the four years previous to his coming to College he was a member of the Phillips Academy at Exeter, N. H. ; he joined the Class at the beginning of the Sophomore year. After graduation he went to the Rochester Theological Seminary to study for the ministry. In 1873 he was selected as the professor of exegetical studies in this institution, and with this object in view went abroad in August, for a three years' course of study ; he attended the lectures at Leipsic, and travelled extensively in Europe and the Holy Land. He returned in the summer of 1876, and entered upon his duties as professor at Rochester in September. On July 18, 1877, he was to have been ordained at Exeter, N. H. ; but his health failed so rapidly that he was obliged to return at once to his home in Lowell, where he died Aug. 5, 1877, aged thirty years and five months.

BUCKMINSTER, WILLIAM B. Upon graduation entered the office of Charles W. Dabney & Co., commission merchants ; after a year took charge of the Boston office of E. Murdock, Jr. ; in 1874 became connected with the house of Isaac Rich & Co., 33 Mason Building, Boston, remaining with them a number of years; in 1884 became treasurer and manager of the Napa Consolidated Quicksilver Mining Company of California — and is now vice-president of same, and other quicksilver companies; vice-president and general manager the Crystal Springs Manufacturing Company, Boston, Mass.; chairman Malden Water Board, 1892 to 1898; chairman Joint Water Boards Malden, Medford, and Melrose, 1893 to 1898; member of Malden Common Council, 1886–87; trustee Forest Dale Cemetery since 1892; was married Sept. 14, 1870, to Christine Isabella Chase, of Leominster, Mass. On Jan. 17, 1872, William Read Buckminster, on June 23, 1874, Harold Chase Buckminster, and on Dec. 5, 1880, Morey Willard Buckminster were born; on Jan. 31, 1898, Morey died; and on June 8, 1886, Roy Buckminster was born; on April 23, 1893, Roy died.

Residence, Dexter Street, Malden Mass. Business address, Rooms 73, 74, and 75, 70 Kilby Street, Boston. Is a member of Algonquin Club, Boston, and Kernwood Club, Malden.

BUNTON, GEORGE W. In April, 1872, entered the employ of Taylor, Thomas & Co., importers and jobbers of dry goods, with whom he remained until Dec. 31, 1897, when the firm was dissolved. He then became associated with the corporation of Curtis Davis & Co., soap manufacturers, as secretary, and holds the same position with their successors, Lever Brothers, Limited, Boston works. Is a member of the Newtowne Club. Was married Dec. 18, 1877, to Ellena S. Brown. George Herbert Bunton was born Sept. 26, 1878; Sumner Augustus was born Feb. 9, 1884 — died Feb. 14, 1884; Florence Elena was born Feb. 14, 1885; Lillian Gertrude was born Sept. 10, 1889. Present address is 63 Washington Avenue, North Cambridge, Mass.

BURNHAM, ARTHUR. In the banking business, first with Blake Brothers & Co., of New York, and with the same house in Boston until April 24, 1886; Oct. 22, 1886, was elected president of the National City Bank of Boston, serving in that capacity until January, 1889; then and since in business as banker and broker on his own account, and corporation treasurer, at Room 701, Massachusetts Building, 60 State Street, Boston, where he now is. Was married Sept. 30, 1875, to Catherine Davenport Bray, of Boston. On August 10, 1876, Roger N. Burnham was born; on Jan. 21, 1881, Margaret W. Burnham; on Nov. 22, 1884, Helen Burnham; and on March 24, 1888, Arthur Stanton Burnham.

CHAMBERLIN, WILLIAM W. After graduation was connected with H. H. Chamberlin & Co., wool-dealers and manufacturers, Worcester, Mass.; was admitted into the firm Jan. 1, 1872. On June 12, 1872, was married to Elizabeth Furguson Paine, of Worcester; and on August 6, 1873, Henry Harmon Chamberlin, Jr., was born. In February, 1880, a comedy entitled "Midsummer Madness," by Chamberlin and Sullivan (T. R.), was successfully produced at the Boston Museum. [No report.]

CHAPIN, FREDERIC W. From August, 1870, until Feb. 27, 1873, studied medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and in the office of Dr. Willard Parker, in New York, receiving the degree of M. D. at the above college; for two years was on the house staff of Bellevue Hospital, and is now practising in Springfield, Mass. On April 1, 1879, was appointed assistant medical examiner of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company of Springfield; and in February, 1885, was appointed chief medical examiner of said company; April 3, 1879, was appointed one of the board of examining surgeons for pensions; and, July 1, 1879, one of the visiting surgeons to the Springfield Hospital. Is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the Hampden District Medical Society, and the Springfield Medical Club; was appointed trustee of the Northampton Insane Hospital by Governor Wolcott, Jan. 25, 1899. On June 18, 1878, was married to Caroline Minna Cole, of Cambridge, Mass. Laurence Dudley Chapin was born Nov. 19, 1880; Leslie Chapin, Oct. 10, 1881; Eleanor Chapin, Oct. 3, 1885.

CHAPMAN, NELSON C. Travelled in Europe for a year: since his return has been connected with the Eau Claire Lumber Company, St. Louis, of which he has been treasurer since 1876. On Oct. 21, 1879, was married to Mary Bridge, of St. Louis. [From last Report. No reply received.]

CLAPP, HENRY L. September, 1870, opened a private classical school in Hartford, Conn.; for four years, beginning April, 1871, had charge of the Mather School, a branch of the Lawrence School, South Boston; 1875, on application transferred to the Lincoln School, South Boston; 1876, on application transferred to the Dudley School, Roxbury; 1882, elected principal of the George Putnam School, Egleston Square, Roxbury District, Boston, which position he retains. Especially interested in science work for common schools, music, and art. Has had several pictures admitted to the exhibitions of the Boston Art Club. In 1899, spent five months in Holland, France, Switzerland, and Germany.

Essays: "The Æsthetic Side of Education," Massachusetts Schoolmasters' Club, 1895; "Some Native Ferns of New England," Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Belmont Improvement Society, Boston Society of Natural History, 1898; and numerous essays on science-teaching before the principal teachers' associations of Massachusetts.

Literary Publications: Journal of Education, "About Wild Flowers" (thirty-six illustrated articles), 1881; "Thirty-six Observation Lessons on Common Minerals," published by D. C. Heath & Co., and adopted as Science Guide No. 15 by the Boston Society of Natural History, 1889; Transactions of Massachusetts Horticultural Society, "Horticultural Education of Children," 1890, "Some Native Ferns of New England," 1898, Popular Science Monthly, "The Scientific Method with Children," 1893, "The Educative Value of Children's Questioning," 1896, "School Gardens," 1898; Education, "The Æsthetic Side of Education," 1895, "The Inadequacy of the Transmission of Learning," 1896, "The Nature and Purpose of Nature Study," 1896, "Color Work in Public Schools," 1897, "Special Schools for Feeble-minded Children," 1898; Asa Gray Bulletin, "Mushrooms in Germany," 1900; numerous articles on botany and mineralogy in educational journals.

Musical Publications: "Harvard Galop," White, Smith & Co., 1873; "Sea Song," "Summer Song" (1887), "Vacation Song," "Leaving Port" (1888), "The Spinner," "Evening Song," (1890), Ginn & Co.

Is a member of the Massachusetts Schoolmasters' Club, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston Society of Natural History, Boston Mycological Club, and New England Botanical Club. Chairman School Garden and Children's Herbarium Committee of Massachusetts Horticultural Society since 1894. July 9, 1874, was married to Florence S. Greeley, of South Boston. Philip Greeley Clapp was born Aug. 4, 1888. Residence, 14 Rockville Park, Roxbury, Mass.

COES, ZORESTER B. During the fall of 1870 was engaged on the Engineer Corps of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad; in August, 1871, was connected in a similar way with the Kansas Central Railroad, remaining in Kansas until January, 1872, when he returned to Boston; 1872–74, surveying and water work for the town of Woburn, Mass. Since that time has been engaged in machine work in the ship and drawing office, principally with machine tool firms in New England and Central West. Became member of American Society of Mechanical Engineers, August, 1881. 1884–96, was connected with the Niles Tool Works Co., Hamilton, Ohio. At present is engaged in commission business in metal working machinery, with location in Bourse, Philadelphia. Was married Feb. 22, 1882, at Cranston, R. I., to Alice Miller, of that place. Has two children, Harold Vinton Coes, born at Hyde Park, Mass., June 21, 1883; and Elizabeth Alden Coes, born at Hamilton, Ohio, May 3, 1886. Present address, Bourse, Philadelphia, and for mail, 110 Harvey St., Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.

COLE, JOHN H. Studied in the Harvard Law School; received the degree of LL. B. in 1872, after which he took a post-graduate course until March, 1873; from March to October, 1871, travelled in Europe and the East; was admitted to the bar in Boston in December, 1873, and in New York in October, 1874, having entered the offices of Gray & Davenport of the latter city in the spring of 1873; on Jan. 1, 1877, became a member of the firm; in 1879, was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States; withdrew from the firm of Gray & Davenport in October, 1880, and began practice alone. Is a member of the association of the bar of the city of New York, and for five years, ending January, 1900, was a member of the committee on admissions of that association; the third and fourth years serving as secretary, and the fifth year as chairman of the committee; is now a member of the executive committee, and chairman of the house committee. Was secretary of the Church Club of New York for six years, and is now its president; is a member of the Century Association, the University Club, the New York Yacht Club, and the Harvard Club. Was married Sept. 26, 1877, to Lucy May Smith, of New York. Lucy May Cole was born Dec. 31, 1881. Mrs. Cole died January 24, 1882. Was married June 11, 1885, at Oxford, England, to Josephine McIlvaine Hewson. Office, 35 Wall Street. Residence, 6 East 10th Street, New York.

*CROSBY, WILLIAM SAGE. Was born at Roxbury, Mass., Nov. 8, 1848: his parents were William and Mary Elizabeth (Bowles) Crosby. He was fitted for college at the Roxbury Latin School, and entered in regular course with the Class in 1866. After graduation he entered the Harvard Medical School, where he remained until 1874, when he received the degree of M. D.; in the same year he was appointed assistant port physician of the city of Boston, and stationed at Deer Island; in the latter part of 1874 he removed to Littleton, N. H., where he intended to practise. While on his way to visit a patient, he took a severe cold, which was followed by pneumonia, causing his death. He died at Littleton, N. H., April 6, 1875, aged twenty-six years and five months.

CURTIS, LAURENCE. Immediately after graduation, went abroad; in the following summer returned to Boston, and entered the office of Lee, Higginson & Co., brokers; on Jan. 1, 1874, opened an office in Boston, as a stock and note broker, and was admitted a member of the Boston Stock Exchange; on July 1, 1879, formed a partnership with C. C. Jackson ('63) and F. Jackson ('71), under the firm name of Jackson & Curtis. Travelled in Europe in 1883, 1887, 1888, 1890, and 1899. In April, 1899, he retired from active participation in business. Is a member of the Somerset, University, Nahant, and Country clubs; also the Toby Club on Buzzard's Bay, the Reform Club of New York, and honorary member of St. Andrews Golf Club of Yonkers, N. Y. Address, 15 Congress Street, Boston.

CURTIS, LOUIS. Spent the summer of 1870 in France and England; in November, 1870, entered the office of Brown Brothers & Co., bankers, 50 State Street, Boston; and on Jan. 1, 1878, Curtis and George E. Bullard were appointed agents and attorneys in Boston for this firm, and for Brown, Shipley & Co., of London and Liverpool. Has travelled extensively in this country and in Europe. Was married in October, 1890, to Fanny Leland Richardson; Aug., 1891, Louis Curtis, Jr., was born, and Sept., 1893, Laurence Curtis, 2d, was born.

CURTIS, REST F. Has been engaged in teaching, since graduation, at East Weymouth, Mass., Newport, R. I., Framingham, Mass., and Boston; in 1882 became one of the teachers in Chauncy Hall School; in 1884 was the head of the mathematical department. In 1891 became associate principal, while retaining his position in the mathematical department. In 1896 associated himself with the Hale School, Boston, and since 1897 has been its principal. Business address, 86 Beacon Street, Boston; Home address, 25 Kinross Road, Aberdeen, Boston.

CUSHING, LOUIS T. Was engaged in farming in Madison, Wis., until November, 1872, when he moved to Cohasset, Mass., where he resides. Studied law in the Boston University, receiving the degree of LL. B. June 2, 1875, and was admitted to the bar June 5, 1875; is practising at Cohasset. Since 1883 has been actively engaged in cattle ranching in Tom Green County, Texas; and he passes a portion of each year on his ranch. Was a Representative in the General Court in 1883–84, trustee of the Cohasset Public Library since 1886, and a member of the Cohasset School Committee for the past twenty-five years. On Feb. 14, 1871, was married to Mary Rebecca Johnson, of Cohasset. The births of their children have been as follows: on May 2, 1872, Thomas Johnson; on Dec. 31, 1873, Charles Baldwin; on Jan. 6, 1876, William Fabens; on Sept. 17, 1877, Robert Lee; on Nov. 9, 1884, Richard Watson; and on Nov. 25, 1886, Sally Fabens.

CUTLER, ARTHUR H. After graduation, and until the autumn of 1873, was with Walter Brown & Son, wool commission merchants, New York; since then has been engaged in teaching in the same city. In the autumn of 1876 he organized the Cutler School for boys, and still remains its principal. Two hundred and forty-seven graduates of this school have entered college or schools of science, and eighty-four of these have entered Harvard.

In 1885 he received the honorary degree of Ph. D. from Princeton. In 1893 he was secretary of the National Conference on Mathematics which met at Harvard at the request of the Committee of Ten; in 1896 he was secretary of the Conference on Mathematics which met at Columbia. Is a member of the Century, University, and Harvard clubs in New York City, the Headmasters' Association of the United States, and several other associations of teachers. In 1897 he was president of the Schoolmasters' Association of New York. August 2, 1890, he married Mrs. Elizabeth Jones (Wilson). Has one son, Frederick Holland Wilson-Cutler. Address, 20 East 50th Street, New York City.

*DAVIS, FRANK DU PONT. After graduation he went into the house of Blake Brothers & Co., of Boston, to learn the business of banking. The department of the business to which he devoted himself was commercial paper. He remained with the Boston house about two years, when he was transferred to the New York house of the same firm. He at once made himself an important place in the house, attending chiefly to the paper dealt in, buying and selling for the firm, and himself conducting large transactions. He very soon became so well acquainted with the dealers and the market, that his judgment was much relied on. In the summer of 1875 Mr. F. P. Olcott, one of the members of the firm of Blake Brothers & Co., with Davis, formed a partnership under the name of F. P. Olcott & Co., for the purpose of dealing in commercial paper. This new firm at once began to do a large business, being at one time agents for the State of New York for placing certain of its securities. To the great disappointment of Davis, Mr. Olcott, in the early part of 1877, was induced to accept the office of Comptroller of the State of New York, which he did, as he supposed temporarily, retaining his business connection in some degree with Davis, but leaving upon Davis's young shoulders the burden of their business. It was in the summer or spring after this that the constitutional weakness began to develop itself which afterwards entirely wrecked his health. There is little reason to doubt that had it not been for his constant and enforced devotion to his business this year, and the care and anxiety it gave him, standing as he did alone, his health would not have been so rapidly impaired. He was able to give himself no rest, when rest was the best and almost the only remedy. This position of affairs lasted until the summer of 1878, when Davis's health utterly broke down, and he very suddenly gave up everything, and, under the orders of his physicians, went to France. The last year of his life was spent in the south of France, and in Nice, where he died in June, 1879.

DEANE, WALTER. Deane writes : —

"I spent the first year after graduation at my home in Cambridge, Mass., studying and doing some private teaching. In 1871 I became an instructor at St. Mark's School, Southborough, Mass., where I remained till July, 1878. A teacher in a boarding school comes into very close touch with the boys, and among my pleasantest recollections of the life there are the hours spent not only in the school-room, but also in the field, playing on the ball team, on the pond in winter joining in the games of hockey, or perhaps in my room, talking with the boys who became so large a part of my life.

"In 1878 I accepted an invitation from Mr. John P. Hopkinson to become an instructor in his private classical school in Boston, and there I remained for seventeen years, assisting in the work of fitting the boys for Harvard College. I resigned my position in 1895, carrying with me the pleasantest recollections of the teachers with whom I had worked so long, and the hosts of boys whom I had had a share in instructing.

"On Dec. 31, 1878, I married Margaret C., the daughter of the Rev. Dr. Coolidge, and we have lived in Cambridge ever since.

"In the summer of 1880 my interest in the study of botany was suddenly aroused by the analysis of the little Dalibarda (Dalibarda repens, L.), a plant common in our rich New England woods. From that instant every spare moment for many years has been devoted to the study and collection of the flowering plants and the higher flowerless or cryptogamous plants of Northeastern United States. This includes the trees, shrubs, and herbaceous plants. My herbarium of mounted plants now numbers about 35,000 sheets and embraces the region of our country, west to the 100th meridian, and south to the northern boundary of Tennessee and North Carolina. It contains, besides my own collections, plants from almost all the botanists of note who have collected in the above limits, among whom I may mention Mr. C. G. Pringle, the veteran professional collector, Mr. M. S. Beble, the late renowned salicologist, Dr. Thomas Morong, the late eminent authority on the Naiadaceæ, Prof. L. H. Bailey, horticulturist and botanist, distinguished as an authority on the genus Carex, Prof. Lester F. Ward, paleobotanist, Dr. J. N. Rose, special student of the Umbelliferæ, Prof. B. L. Robinson, Mr. M. L. Fernald, Mr. J. R. Churchill, and many others.

"The years 1896 and 1897 were spent partly in private teaching, and partly in compiling and editing the 'Flora of the Blue Hills, Middlesex Fells, Stony Brook and Beaver Brook Reservations of the Metropolitan Park Commission, Massachusetts.' I have published various botanical articles, mainly in 'Rhodora,' the 'Botanical Gazette,' the 'Torrey Bulletin,' and the 'American Garden,' among others sketches of the eminent botanists, Dr. Asa Gray, Dr. Sereno Watson, Dr. Thomas Morong, and Mr. M. S. Bebb, 'Notes from my Herbarium, 1–5,' 'The Ware Collection of Blaschka Glass Models of Flowers at Harvard,' 'A List of the Umbelliferæ and Ericaceæ of New England,' 'The Native Orchids of New England,' etc.

"I was phænogamic curator of the New England Botanical Club for 1898 and 1899, and was elected vice-president for 1900.

"I have been secretary of the Old Cambridge Shakespeare Association since 1883.

"Since October, 1897, I have been associated with Mr. William Brewster, of Cambridge, in his ornithological museum as assistant in charge of the large collection of birds and books, and I have become an active member of the Nuttall Ornithological Club, and an associate member of the American Ornithological Union."

* S. NEWTON DEXTER. S. Newton Dexter, who died of consumption in New York, on Feb. 21, 1899, was born May 19, 1848, at Whiteboro, N. Y. His family was among the original settlers of Oneida County. He came of the New England family of Dexters, a member of which gave to Harvard a considerable endowment more than a century ago. His grandfather, S. Newton Dexter, who was a nephew of Samuel Dexter, of President John Adams's cabinet, was one of the prominent and wealthy men of his time.

After his graduation, in 1870, at Harvard, Dexter edited the "Rocky Mountain News," of Denver, Colo., for two years, and, except for a few years spent abroad, was connected with the editorial staff of the New York "Sun" from that time up to the date of his death.

While abroad in the year 1890 he met his wife, a pianiste of reputation, and publisher of several musical works; a resident of New York, of old Knickerbocker parentage, her mother having been a Cowenhoven, of the family of early Dutch settlers of that name.

He was married August 10, 1892, to Marie Lovell, and for the four years prior to his death was associate editor, with his wife, of the "Parisian Magazine," of which they were the owners and originators, while filling at the same time his position as a night editor on the New York "Sun." He was a man of fine moral sense, of high intellectuality, with a nature of the truest delicacy and refinement.

Although by education and association he was a Protestant during his life, he had always a strong tendency toward Catholicism, and before he died received the last rites of the Roman Church and was buried from the Church of the Paulist Fathers, where high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Alex. P. Doyle. The pall-bearers were Profs. Charles F. Chandler and Charles E. Pellow, of Columbia University, Edmund Wetmore, John Floyd, Arthur H. Cutler, and W. B. Crittenden.

DIXON, A. J. D. Studied law with Morton P. Henry, Philadelphia, and was admitted to the bar June 26, 1873; is residing and practising law in Philadelphia, his office address being 221 South Fifth Street. Was married on Nov. 27, 1878, to Margaretta Sergeant, of Harrisburg, Penn. House address, 709 Pine Street, Philadelphia. Clubs: Philadelphia Club; Racquet Club; Huntingdon Valley Golf Club.

DIXWELL, JOHN. Entered the Harvard Medical School in the fall of 1870; graduated with the degree of M. D., 1873; has practised ever since, having his house and office at 52 West Cedar Street. Has been the general agent of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children; director of the Industrial Aid Society of Boston; physician to the Boston Dispensary; member of the Boston Natural History Society, American Society for the Advancement of Science, Boston Medical Benevolent Society, Boston Medical Library Association; visitor for the Boston Provident Society, etc., director of the American Invalid Aid Society, and manager of the Hospital Music Fund. Is interested in industrial and charitable works here and elsewhere. Professional specialty of greatest interest thus far, diseases of the lungs and heart. Is married to youngest daughter of the late Captain H. L. Gurney.

DODGE, WILLIAM W. Travelled abroad after graduation, and on his return devoted a year to the study of English and German literature, attending some courses of University lectures; after a few months in an office, entered the Harvard Law School in 1871; received the degree of LL. B. in June, 1873, and was admitted to the bar in July, 1874; is practising in Boston. Residence, 72 Sparks Street, Cambridge, Mass.

DREW, CHARLES A. After graduation studied law; was admitted to the bar July 1, 1873, and is practising in Boston. On Aug. 3, 1875, was married to Hattie W. Clark, of Chelsea, Mass.; and on July 10, 1876, Bertha Vincent Drew was born. Residence, Newton, Mass. Office, Equitable Building, Boston.

DUDLEY, EDWARD. After graduation travelled in Europe and the East, returning in October, 1871; was then appointed United States deputy consul at Liverpool, England; was soon after made vice-consul, having full charge of the consulate; returned to America in January, 1873; studied law at Camden, N. J., with Peter L. Voorhees, Esq., and began to practise as attorney at law in November, 1874; is practising at Camden; in November, 1877, was admitted as counsellor at law; in February, 1878, was appointed by the Chancellor of New Jersey a special master of the Court of Chancery; was also appointed a Supreme Court Commissioner. On May 21, 1878, was married to Mary Shaw Bird, of Philadelphia; and on April 1, 1879, Edward Lawrence Dudley was born. Mrs. Dudley died April 25, 1879. Nov. 15, 1881, was married to Mary Thurber Brooks, of Providence; and on June 11, 1884, May Irene Dudley was born. Mrs. Dudley died, May 12, 1886. On July 15, 1895, left for San Francisco on a trip around the world which lasted until June, 1896, during the trip visiting Honolulu, Japan, China, Siam, Singapore, Penang, Island of Ceylon, India from Calcutta to Bombay, overland, Arabia, Egypt, and Europe. Is a member of the New York Yacht Club, the University Club of New York, the Manhattan Club of New York; the Union League Club of Philadelphia, the Harvard Club of Philadelphia; the Philadelphia Country Club. On March 4, 1899, was married to Marie Gordon Mulock, of New York. Summer residence, The Grange, Camden, N. J.; winter residence, Philadelphia. Office, 35 North 2d Street, Camden, N. J.

DWIGHT, JOHN. In October, 1870, opened an English classical school for both sexes, called the Rahway Institute, in Rahway, N. J., where he remained until August, 1876, when he was appointed master of the Johnson School in Woburn, Mass.; the following year became master of the Cummings School in the same town; and in November, 1877, was appointed a sub-master in the Lincoln School, South Boston; in December, 1889, was transferred to the Thomas N. Hart School, Boston, as sub-master; became master in 1895. On Dec. 18, 1873, was married to Helen Louise Woodruff, of Rahway; and on March 28, 1875, Helen Hastings Dwight was born; she died Jan. 11, 1892; Bernard Woodruff Dwight was born March 30, 1881, and died Jan. 7, 1882; Edith Marion Dwight was born August 13, 1883; and John Francis Dwight, Oct. 20, 1885. Residence, Weymouth, Mass.

EMOTT, CHARLES C. Studied law in New York; received the degree of LL. B. from Columbia College in 1872; practised law in New York from 1873 to 1882, when he became secretary of the John J. Crooke Company, a corporation engaged in the manufacture of tin and lead foil. Is a member of the University Club in New York, and of the Society of the Cincinnati, Rhode Island Chapter. Was married May 22, 1873, to Leila C. Tuckerman, of Cambridge, Mass. Has one son, James, born May 28, 1874. .

* EVANS, A. OTIS. Was the son of Hosea Ballou Evans and of Harriet French (sister of Hon. Jonas H. French), and was born in Boston, May 26, 1847. He was brought up in the public schools of his native city; was graduated from the Brimmer (Grammar) School in 1860, receiving a Franklin medal; entered the English High School the same year. In 1862 he was awarded the prize for "excellence in the literary department," and the next year he received one for "general merit." After leaving the high school he spent a few months in Europe, confining himself principally to the study of German in Hanover; returning to Boston in the fall of 1865, he took a short course in the Public Latin School, and entered Harvard College in 1866, from which he was graduated in the year 1870. After a year spent in commercial pursuits in New York, he returned to Cambridge, and entered the Dane Law School, remaining one year there; and then attended the Boston University Law School for another year, receiving from the latter institution his degree of LL. B. in 1873. After a few months of study in the office of Brooks & Ball, he began the practice of the law in November, 1873, and was prosperous from the beginning. His health failing him, he went on an extensive tour West in the winter of 1877, going by steamer from New York to San Francisco, and travelling for six months in California and other Western States. In the winter of 1878 he went South for his health; returned the following May, evidently improved, and remained in Boston until his death, September, 1879.

FERNALD, BENJAMIN M. Entered the law office of Judge Wiggin, Exeter, N. H., where he studied until April 16, 1873, when he was admitted to the Rockingham bar and to a partnership with Judge Wiggin, with offices in Exeter and Boston; was made justice of the peace, and police justice for the town of Exeter; taught a grammar school from September, 1871, until July, 1872; since Jan. 1, 1876, has practised in Boston. In 1881 and 1882 represented the town of Melrose in the Legislature of Massachusetts; was chairman of the Committee on Taxation there in 1881, and was on the Judiciary Committee in 1882. Delivered the address on Memorial Day, 1888, before the U. S. Grant Post of the G. A. R. at Melrose. Represented the Sixth Middlesex District in the Senate of Massachusetts in 1891 and 1892. In 1891 was chairman of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, and a member of the Judiciary Committee. In 1892, was chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and chairman of Joint Special Committee on Public Reservation. In 1892 was appointed chairman of the Joint Special Committee to revise the judicial system of the Commonwealth, and report in print to the Legislature of 1893. In 1892 delivered the address on Memorial Day at Saugus. On Nov. 25, 1874, was married to Grace Fuller, of Cambridge, Mass.; on Sept. 12, 1877, Ethel Fernald was born, and on Feb. 9, 1893, Paul Fuller Fernald was born. April 22, 1895, Paul Fuller Fernald died; May 5, 1896, Margaret Fernald was born. Is a director in the Melrose Coöperative Bank, a member of the Melrose Savings Bank Corporation, president and director of the Braintree Red Granite Company, treasurer and director of the Fells Ice Company; withdrew from the firm of Wiggin & Fernald, Jan. 1, 1900, and is practising law at 28 State Street, Boston, Mass.

FISHER, GEORGE HARRISON. Pursued the study of the law in the office of George W. Biddle, Philadelphia, until March, 1873, when he was admitted to the bar. On April 20, 1876, was married to Betsey Riddle, of Philadelphia. On March 12, 1877, Anna Fisher was born, and on Oct. 29, 1881, Francis Fisher. On Jan. 18, 1899, Anna Fisher was married to William Howard Hart, of Philadelphia; Francis Fisher is a Freshman at Harvard. My occupations not legal are partially indicated by the following offices which I hold: —

Secretary of the Library Company of Philadelphia, member of Council of Historical Society of Pennsylvania, director of Athenæum of Philadelphia, vice-president of Pennsylvania Institution for the Blind, director of Philadelphia Dispensary, treasurer of Fund for Disabled Clergyman of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, member of Standing Committee of Diocese of Pennsylvania.

Clubs: The Philadelphia, The Philadelphia Country, Germantown Cricket, Huntingdon Valley Country, Reform Club of New York, The Shakespeare Society of Philadelphia. Office, 308 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

FITZ, ANDREW. In October, 1870, began studying law with Perry & Endicott, Salem, Mass.; was appointed justice of the peace and notary public April 1, 1873; was admitted to the Essex bar Oct. 3, 1873; Nov. 1, 1877, formed a partnership for the practice of law with Tuckerman ('68) and Huntington ('70), at Salem. Partnership of Tuckerman, Huntington & Fitz dissolved by the withdrawal of Tuckerman, July 1, 1885; new partnership of Huntington & Fitz, July 1, 1885. December, 1893, was elected a member of the school committee of Salem for three years; reëlected December, 1896, and December, 1899. Is now major of 2d Corps Cadets, M. V. M., having joined the corps April 23, 1874. On Feb. 13, 1878, was married to Susie J. Chase, of Salem. On April 19, 1879, Ellen Mary Fitz was born; and on Dec. 13, 1884, Daniel Chase Fitz. Office, 256½ Essex Street, Salem.

FRANCIS, LAURENS N. From August, 1870, until February, 1871, was principal of an academy in West Randolph, Vt.; until September, 1871, studied law with Judge Bennett (Bennett & Fuller), of Taunton, Mass.; from September, 1871, until January, 1872, taught at Southboro', Mass., and at Cambridge until September, 1872, when he returned to the Taunton office, at the same time entering on the duties of private tutor in Judge Bennett's family; in September, 1873, was admitted to the bar, and in the following December opened an office in Taunton; was clerk of the First District Court of Bristol from 1874 to 1879; was in Common Council of City of Taunton, 1881 and 1882. Was married to Minnie Field Worsley, June 20, 1883. Their only child, Marjorie Worsley Francis, was born March 16, 1898, Resides at 19 Clinton Street, and his office is at Rooms 6 and 7 Crocker Building, Taunton Mass.

FROTHINGHAM, THEODORE. Engaged in business in Philadelphia as ship-broker and commission merchant from graduation until July, 1886; then became connected with the Solicitors' Loan and Trust Company, as secretary, and is now vice-president and treasurer; also has been president of the Commercial Trust Company, of this city, since its organization in 1894; secretary and assistant treasurer of the Schuylkill River East Side Railroad Company since 1886; treasurer of the Philadelphia Orthopædic Hospital; and as director is connected with a number of other corporations; has been a member of the council of the New England Society of Pennsylvania since 1893, and was elected president of the Harvard Club of Philadelphia in February, 1895. Is a member of the Rittenhouse, Philadelphia Country, and other clubs. May 22, 1888, was married to Lucy Jaudon Harris, of Philadelphia, and has four children: Theodore Frothingham, Jr., born April 19, 1889; Thomas Harris Frothingham, born April 5, 1891; Huntington Wolcott Frothingham, born Sept. 19, 1893; and William Bainbridge Frothingham, born Oct. 30, 1898. Address, 142 South Fourth Street, Philadelphia.

FULLER, FREDERIC T. Was engaged in carrying on the home farm at Wayland, Mass., from 1870 to 1875, when he accepted the position of instructor in English at Phillips Exeter Academy, being the first teacher employed in the English Department, then recently founded. After teaching for three years, he resigned on account of physical incapacity for the work, and removed to Sioux Falls, Dakota, where he was engaged in farming, negotiating loans, etc., until 1881, when he returned to Massachusetts and became a reporter on the staff of the "Boston Traveller." He continued in the service of that paper as State House reporter, writer of political gossip, and editorial assistant, until February, 1886, when sedentary overwork resulted in inflammation of the spine and a complete physical breakdown. After some months he recovered sufficiently to resume newspaper work as editor of the "Charlestown Tribune" and State House correspondent for the "Transcript" and other papers; but shortly afterward succumbed to a mental disorder due to overwork and anxiety. Is now in apparent good health. In January, 1885, his article in the "Boston Literary World," entitled "Hawthorne and Margaret Fuller," was widely commented upon. In 1893 and 1894 drafted and secured the passage of an "Act for the Reclamation of the Sudbury Meadows, and the protection of the public health in the valleys of the Concord and Sudbury rivers." Now receives private pupils for college and preparatory work. Was married Nov. 2, 1871, to Ella J. Sherman, of Wayland. August 5, 1872, Mabel Warren Fuller was born; May 8, 1877, Clara Margaret Fuller; April 2, 1879, Lucy Fuller; May 27, 1885, Edwin Sherman Fuller; March 22, 1887, Richard Frederick Fuller; and May 27, 1888, Willard Perrin Fuller.

GALLOWAY, JAMES B. After graduation became junior partner of the firm of Andrew J. Galloway & Son, dealers and brokers in real estate, Chicago, Ill., at the same time reading law; in the spring of 1877 left the real estate business, and was admitted to the bar in April, 1878. Until Jan. 1, 1890, was alone in the practice of law, on which date he formed a partnership with Francis O. Lyman, H. C., '71, and James Patton, under name of Galloway, Lyman & Patton, for doing a real estate and mortgage loan business, meanwhile keeping his individual practice of the law till May 1, 1895, when he admitted a law partner, Adolph Traub, under name of Galloway & Traub. In May, 1876, the firm of Galloway, Lyman & Patton was dissolved, since when the firm of Galloway & Traub has continued in business at 115 Monroe Street, Chicago. Has printed a brochure on Captain John Smith, and written a number of articles on local matters, published in "The Economist" and other Chicago papers, the most important one being a report on the U. S. Government work on the Chicago and Calumet Harbors and Rivers, prepared for the Chicago Real Estate Board in 1899. Is member of the Real Estate Exchange of Boston, and the Real Estate Board of Chicago. Is member of the University Club of Chicago. Married Sept. 5, 1876, to Helen M. Kimball, of Chicago, from whom he obtained decree of divorce on Nov. 10, 1879. Married Jan. 5, 1884, to Henriette Osterritter, of Miehlen, Germany. Robert Slocum Galloway, born Jan. 17, 1893. Henry James Galloway, born Aug. 16, 1895. Elizabeth Galloway, born Dec. 10, 1896, died Jan. 10, 1897.

Present address, 115 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.

GANNETT, THOMAS B. Left college at the end of his Junior year, but received his degree of A. B. on Commencement 1897. Since 1871 has been in the sugar refining business. Was married Dec. 18, 1873, to Edith Francis Bates; has four children: Thomas Brattle, Jr., born Feb. 28, 1876 (Harvard 1897); Edith, born June 5, 1877; Charlotte Sanger, born August 20, 1878; and Robert Tileston, born May 12, 1893. Residence, Cambridge.

*GODON, FREDERIC WILLIAM. Was born at Philadelphia, June 3, 1848. His father was Rear-Admiral Sylvanus W. Godon of the United States Navy; his mother was before her marriage Sarah K. Nevins, of Philadelphia. He studied at home with his father until thirteen years of age, when he attended a Latin school in Philadelphia; he afterwards passed about a year at the Polytechnic College of Pennsylvania, and completed his preparation for college with William A. Kilburn at Lancaster, Mass., entering with the Class in 1866. After graduation he began the study of medicine in the office of Prof. W. H. Van Buren, New York; was connected with the Charity Hospital at Blackwell's Island, and took the degree of M. D. at the Bellevue Hospital Medical College in April, 1872; was then assistant at the Infants' Hospital, Randall's Island, N. Y., until the summer of 1872, when he went abroad, where he pursued his studies in Ireland and on the Continent. He received, besides the degree mentioned above, that of Licentiate of the King and Queen's College of Physicians, Ireland, in October, 1872, and of Licentiate in Midwifery, in November, 1872. He returned to New York in the summer of 1874, and began the practice of his profession; but in the fall of 1875 removed to San Francisco. During his college course he was a frequent contributor to the daily and college papers, and he afterwards wrote several medical treatises. He was a member of a number of medical and scientific societies. He died suddenly, of quick consumption, at San Rafael, California, Sept. 22, 1876, aged twenty-eight years and three months.

* GREENE, SAMUEL FAY. Was born at Pittsfield, N. H., Feb. 25, 1846. He attended the district schools and the academy in his native place until he was fourteen, when he left school and followed the occupation of a farmer. In his eighteenth year he began to fit for college, and entered the Sophomore class at Dartmouth in 1867; in September, 1868, he joined the Class of 1870 (Harvard) as a Junior. From September, 1870, until March, 1871, he was principal of a grammar school at Tarrytown, N. Y.; until the summer of 1872 was principal of the Gale Grammar School at Troy, N. Y., at the same time reading law in the office of Banker, Rising & Boise; passed the year of 1872–73 abroad, and on his return was admitted to the bar in St. Louis, where he practised up to the time of his death. He died, of malarial fever and diptheria, Oct. 16, 1877, at Collinsville, Ill., aged thirty-one years and eight months.

GREENER, RICHARD THEODORE. September, 1870, principal Male Department Institute, Philadelphia, Pa.; January, 1872, principal Sumner High School, Washington, D. C. While in this position became associate editor of "New National Era and Citizen." Was appointed law clerk in the office of the attorney for the District of Columbia. October, 1873, elected professor of mental and moral philosophy and logic in the University of South Carolina at Columbia, S. C.; 1875–77 member of the Board of Health of Columbia; did excellent service in matters of drainage and the city water supply; 1875 elected a member of the American Philological Association, and elected by the legislature a member of the commission to revise the school system of the State. While performing the duties of his own professorship in the South Carolina University, he assisted in the departments of Latin and Greek, Mathematics, and Constitutional History, pursued at the same time the study of law, and was graduated from the Law School of the University of South Carolina in 1876; Dec. 20 was admitted to the Supreme Court of the State, after examination in open court. In the campaign of 1876, he took a prominent part for Hayes and Wheeler, and the Chamberlain government in South Carolina. While professor in the South Carolina University, he acted as librarian, from May to November, 1875, rearranging the 27,000 volumes of that rare library, and began the preparation of a catalogue. A special committee of the General Assembly, December, 1875, said: "We commend, especially, the incalculable benefits which the untiring efforts of Professor Greener have added to the library of the University, through which a complete and perfect classification of the books has been made, and the whole appearance of the library improved." In April, 1877, he was summoned to Washington, before the Committee of Congress; May 22, 1877, he was appointed by Hon. D. M. Key, Postmaster-General to a clerkship in the Post Office Department; July 26, 1877, after passing a civil service examination, he was appointed by Secretary Sherman a first-class clerk in the Treasury Department; April 14, 1877, was admitted to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, on motion of Hon. William A. Cook; December, 1877, became Dean of the Law Department of Howard University, serving until 1880. He began the active practice of law, 1878, a member of the firm of Cook & Greener. He devoted much time to literary and political work, being in active demand as a speaker and writer. In 1880 he was promoted to be law clerk to the First Comptroller, Judge William Lawrence, and helped edit the first three volumes of Lawrence's Reports. In 1879 he was made secretary of the Exodus Committee, and as such lectured in St. Louis, Chicago, New York, and Boston on the reasons for it, and debated the question with Frederick Douglass at the Social Science Congress at Saratoga, Sept. 13, 1879. He volunteered to defend the colored Cadet Whittaker, 1880, at West Point, accused of mutilating himself. The case became a celebrated one. Mr. Greener demanded a court-martial for the cadet, after the decision of the Court of Inquiry, which was refused by the West Point authorities, and considered untenable by the United States Attorney-General and the Judge Advocate General. Mr. Greener presented, in 1880, a legal demand upon the Secretary of War, which, after careful consideration by Attorney-General Devens, was granted, Dec. 28, 1880, thus establishing the precedent that a cadet at the United States Military Academy is an officer of the United States army. This case lasted two years, and cost the United States government over $50,000. Jan. 20 to June 15, 1881, he was associated with Daniel H. Chamberlain in the defence of Cadet Whittaker at the court-martial held in New York City. In March, 1882, he resigned his law clerkship to practise law. In 1882 he received the degree of LL. D. from the College of Monrovia. Professor Greener was a member of the Republican conference held at New York, Aug. 4, 1880, which united the Republican factions for Garfield, representing South Carolina, from 1876 to 1880 having been president of the South Carolina Republican Club at Washington. From 1875 to 1881 he represented that State in the "Union League of America." He was one of the "Committee of Thirty," Washington, D. C., on the inauguration of Garfield and Arthur, having taken an active part in the campaign of 1880, speaking in Ohio, Indiana, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. In 1871, 1873, 1875, and 1876, he headed delegations of Republicans and colored men, who waited upon President Grant, and enjoyed the personal friendship and respect of the general, who first met him while visiting Harvard College in 1868. It was to Professor Greener that General Grant, in 1876, made the significant remark: "It 's time to unload." In 1884 he took part in the campaign, speaking for the Republicans in Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Maryland, and West Virginia. On the death of General Grant, July 23, 1885, he was chosen one of the Trustees of the Grant Monument Association, New York City, and from 1885–92 served as the secretary of the association, of which he is still a trustee. From October, 1885, to April, 1890, he was chief examiner of the Civil Service Boards of New York City and County. In 1892 he took part, as a Republican, in the campaign in New Jersey, New York, and Connecticut, under the auspices of the National Committee. Since 1892 he has devoted himself entirely to literary work. In 1894 he was a delegate to the Unitarian Conference at Saratoga, and to the American Missionary Association at Lowell, Mass. He was secretary of the Irish Parlimentary Fund, 1886–87, which raised $150,000 for Parnell and Gladstone, and was secretary of the meeting at the Academy of Music, New York City, at which resolutions were sent to Gladstone. In every reform movement in New York City, since 1885, he has been active for good government and clean politics, but always as a Republican. He was prominent in the reorganization of the Republican party of New York City, under the Committee of Thirty; was one of the incorporators of the Riverside Republican Club, and is now one of the vice-presidents. He was an alternate to the Republican State Convention, October, 1894, which nominated Governor Morton, and a zealous worker against Tammany in favor of reform city politics. He is at present one of the associate editors of the "National Encyclopædia of American Biography." He was married September, 1874, to Genevieve Ida Fleet, of Washington. Their children are, Horace Kempton, born Sept. 11, 1875, died May 11, 1876; Mary Louise, born Jan. 27, 1877, now a Sophomore in the Girls' Normal School, New York City; Russell Lowell, born Feb. 2, 1878, now a Sophomore in College of City of New York; Belle Marion, born Nov. 26, 1879, now in Teachers' College, New York City; Ethel Alice, born Dec. 20, 1880; Theodora Genevieve, born Feb. 22, 1886; Charles Woodman, born August 10, died Nov. 11, 1887. Address, 29 West 99th Street, New York City. [From last report. No reply received.]

GROESBECK, HERMAN J. After graduation studied medicine in Edinburgh and Paris; was graduated at the Royal College of Surgeons, Edinburgh; received the degree of M. D. March 1, 1873, and L. R. C. S., Edinburgh, 1875. On Nov. 5, 1872, was married to Elizabeth Perry, of Cincinnati. The dates of the births of his children are as follows: Elizabeth G. Groesbeck, July 20, 1873; William G. Groesbeck, Sept. 1, 1874; Herman V. Groesbeck, June 23, 1876 (died May 3, 1883); Perry Gray Groesbeck, March 23, 1879 (died May 4, 1883); and Herman G. Groesbeck, August 5, 1884.

HALE, WM. GARDNER. By profession, student and teacher. Was tutor in Latin in Harvard College in 1874–76; in 1876–77 studied abroad, as Harvard Travelling Fellow, in Leipzig, Göttingen, and Rome; in 1877–80 was again tutor in Latin in Harvard College; in 1880 was called to the professorship of the Latin Language and Literature in Cornell University, and in 1892 to the head professorship of the Latin Language and Literature in the University of Chicago, where he now is. Received the degree of LL. D. from Union University at the Centennial of 1895, and from Princeton University at the Sesquicentennial of 1896. Was president of the American Philological Association in 1892; was member and chairman of the Latin Conference, the report of which is published in the "Report of the Committee of Ten," 1894; was member of the subsequent similar committee, appointed by the American Philological Association and the American Educational Association, the report of which was published by both bodies in 1899. Has been associate editor of the "Classical Review" since 1888. Was appointed annual director of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens for the year 1888–89, but declined; was made chairman of the committee appointed to determine whether it was feasible to establish an American School of Classical Studies in Rome, and, later, permanent chairman of the managing committee. Was sent out as director, to establish the School, in the year 1895–96. Discovered in the Vatican Library a Manuscript of Catullus of the first importance, hitherto concealed under a false number. Resigned the chairmanship of the managing committee in 1899. Has published the following, beside a number of short papers, and occasional contributions to "The Nation:" "The Sequence of Tenses in Latin," in the "American Journal of Philology," vol. vii. 4, vol. viii. 1, and vol. ix. 2 (also reprinted); "The Cum-Constructions: their History and Functions," forming Parts I. and II. of No. 1 of the Cornell Studies in Classical Philology, 1888–89; "Die Cum-Konstruktionen: ihre Geschichte und ihre Funktionen," being a translation of the above, by A. Neitzert, with an introduction by Berthold Delbrück, Teubner, 1891; "The Art of Reading Latin: How to teach it," 1887; "L'Art de lire le Latin: comment il faut l'enseigner," being a translation of the above, by Keelhoff, 1890; "Aims and Methods of Classical Study," 1888; "Democracy and Education," "Proceedings of the American Philological Association," vol. xxiv. (being the president's address for the year 1893); "The Place of the University in American Life," "Current Topics," November, 1893 (being the Convocation Address of the University of Chicago for July, 1893); "Should Greek be required for the Degree of Bachelor of Arts?" Report of the National Congress of Education for 1893;

"'Extended' and 'Remote' Deliberatives in Greek," "Transactions of the American Philological Association," vol. xxiv. (also reprinted); "The Anticipatory Subjunctive in Greek and Latin," 1894, being a pre-print from the first volume of the University of Chicago "Studies in Classical Philology;" "Un nuovo manoscritto di Catullo," in "Reports of the Reale Accademia dei Lincei," Rome, 1896; the "Codex Romanus of Catullus," "Classical Review," July 1896; "Der Codex Romanus des Catull," "Hermes" xxxiv. 1 (1899); Reports as Chairman and Director of the School in Rome, "American Journal of Archæology," 1896–1899. Has, in company with Professor Buck, of the University of Chicago, a Latin Grammar for Schools and Colleges (Forms by Mr. Buck, Syntax by Mr. Hale) in the press of Ginn & Co. (1900). Was married, in 1883, to Harriet Knowles Swinburne, of Newport, R. I., and has four children: Swinburne, born 1884; Virginia Swinburne, 1887; Margaret, 1891; and Gardner, 1894.

* HEALY, JOSEPH. Was born in Boston, August 6, 1849, and was the only child of John Plummer Healy and Mary Stickney (Barker) Healy. For four years he attended the Chauncy Hall School; in the fall of 1860 he entered the Boston Public Latin School, where he completed the full term of six years, winning during the course twenty-one Lawrence prizes, and being graduated at the head of his class, with first prize for declamation and first Franklin medal. Entering College without conditions, he was a diligent and successful student, joining the Phi Beta Kappa in his Junior year. Upon graduation he began the study of law as a student in his father's office, and in the fall of 1871 entered the Harvard Law School, where he received the degree of LL. B. in 1873; the summer of 1872 was passed in Europe. Healy was admitted to the bar Sept. 16, 1873, and at once began to practise law in Boston, in partnership with Otis Norcross, Jr. ('70), the firm of Healy & Norcross continuing until his death. He was admitted to practise in the Supreme Court of the United States, at Washington, D. C., March 22, 1880. He was one of the trustees of the valuable estate of the late Peter B. Brigham and of the Franklin Savings Bank of Boston; secretary and treasurer of the Boston Latin School Association; vice-president of the Young Men's Benevolent Society; a member of the Boston Bar Association, the Union, St. Botolph, Pendennis, and Boston Antiquarian clubs, the Boston Memorial Society, and the Bunker Hill Monument Association; and at the time of his death was serving his second term as a member of the Boston Common Council. In the year 1878 he delivered, in the Boston Music Hall, the annual Fourth of July oration before the city government. He married, Sept. 26, 1877, in Brookline, Mass., Alice Hale Bird, who, with his father and mother, and a daughter (Helen Richards Healy, born May 26, 1878), survives him. After leaving College, Healy enjoyed his usual good health. Friday morning, April 16, 1880, he awoke in severe pain, but having an early business engagement, he rode to his office; the pain increasing, he soon returned home, saying that he would be back in two or three hours. His family physician was at once summoned, but did not relieve him. The cause of his illness proved to be peritonitis, accompanied by hernia. Saturday, though very weak, he was thought to be out of danger; but he did not rally, and died shortly before midnight on Sunday, April 18. He was buried from King's Chapel, April 22, the character of the audience which filled the church attesting the estimation in which he was held by his friends and the community. His classmates will appreciate the justice of the following tribute, written by one of their number, which appeared editorially in the "Boston Daily Advertiser," on the day after his funeral: —

"It seldom happens, in a city so large as ours, that the death of so young a man as Joseph Healy is so manifest a loss to the whole community; and yet, to those who have always known him, he has seemed to be only steadily and consistently fulfilling the promises of his early youth. Blessed with excellent abilities and an untiring industry, the tasks at school which others of perhaps equal ability but less application sometimes mastered, he never failed to master; and that he should lead his class and gain the most of the prizes which the Latin School could award followed almost as a matter of course.

"Entering Harvard thus prepared, and doing his College work with the same ability and fidelity that had characterized him at school, he was graduated with high standing in the largest class that had then left the College, and was ready to enter on the work of his profession and of his life. And now was developed a generous public spirit which was alone necessary to round out and complement a character whose capacity for increasing the general good seemed almost without limit. Circumstances favored him; but there are few enough who will conscientiously do the works which others from day to day assign them. There are fewer still who will cheerfully and conscientiously do thankless work, however praiseworthy, which they have assigned themselves. It was desirable, for instance, that interest should be revived in the Boston Young Men's Benevolent Society, whose founders long since ceased to be young men. Clearly, whoever revived that interest would only have his trouble to reward his pains; but Healy interested himself and his friends in the cause, and with substantial results. Again, it was well for Boston and her most famous school that the Latin School Association should be made an active organization; and so, though never making himself particularly prominent, he did the work which has gone far toward making the society a permanent instrument for good. And so the list might be extended of cases in which he quietly did disinterested labor for the general welfare. Faithful and intelligent service in the Common Council was bringing him into a larger circle of acquaintance and recognition; but the qualities which commanded universal respect and esteem in the council chamber were only the results of the development of his early principles and character in a larger field. The purpose of this notice is merely to mention certain points of character which made the subject of this sketch a man whom the community could ill afford to lose. Of the further qualities which endeared him to his domestic and social circles, this is not the place to speak. Let it be simply said that his fidelity to his duty was only equalled by his fidelity to his friends."

HILL, JOHN E. Until the spring of 1873 was with John Hill & Co., manufacturers and dealers in boots and shoes, Boston; then carried on the same business under the firm name of John E. Hill & Co. for the past two years has been engaged as selling agent in the same line of business. Office, 107 Summer Street, Boston. Married Dec. 24, 1892, Caroline Ella Manning, of Rockland, Me. Edwin Manning Hill, born Dec. 22, 1894.

*HINCKLEY, THOMAS LESLIE. Was born Jan. 13, 1849, in Milton, Mass. His father was Thomas Hewes Hinckley, and his mother before her marriage was Sally Ann Bent, of Milton. He was fitted for college at the Milton Academy, entering the Class of 1869 in the fall of 1865. Severe illness necessitated his withdrawal from College for a year, and on his return in 1867 he joined the Class of 1870. After graduation he was for some time in the employ of the Hickory Coal Company of Philadelphia, but afterwards went to San Buena Ventura, Cal., where he engaged in the business of sheep raising, and where he was joined by Hoar ('70). He died, after a lingering illness, in San Francisco, on Nov. 1, 1875, aged twenty-seven years.

HOAR, CHARLES E. For four years in railroad employment in Nebraska and Iowa; for twenty-five years a resident of California, engaged in stock raising and farming. Address Simi, Ventura Co., Cal.

HOLMES, ARTEMAS HENRY. Fitted for College at Phillips Exeter Academy, Class of '66; entered the Harvard Law School in September, 1870; remained there until November, 1871, when business matters occasioned by his father's death obliged him to withdraw without obtaining the Law School degree; resumed his law studies at St. Louis, Mo., in December, 1871; was admitted to the Missouri bar Jan. 29, 1872; passed a year in travelling abroad, and on his return to New York City, his residence, entered the law offices of Chittenden & Hubbard as a clerk; was admitted to the New York bar in May, 1874; became a partner in said firm on Jan. 1, 1875; in May, 1877, formed a partnership with George H. Adams ('70), under the name Holmes & Adams, which continued for nineteen years. He has held no public office. Married Elizabeth J. Allen, of Boston, Mass., Nov. 6, 1875, who died Sept. 1, 1876. Married Lillian Stokes, of New York, May 20, 1880. Children: Artemas Holmes, born Oct. 16, 1881; Lillian Stokes Holmes, born May 1, 1884; and Hilda Holmes, born March 11, 1890. Law offices, 66 Broadway, New York; firm Holmes, Ropollo & Kennedy. Is a member of the following clubs: University, Harvard, Tuxedo, Δ K E, and Sons of the Revolution. Residence, 453 Madison Ave.

HOLWAY, RAYMOND F. Studied in the School of Theology of Boston University, where he took the degree of B. D. in 1873; in April, 1873, joined the New England Conference (Methodist), and was appointed to Blandford, Mass., where he remained until April, 1875, when he was appointed to Florence, Mass.; was ordained deacon April 11, 1875; in the spring of 1878 was appointed to Warren, Mass.; remained in Warren until the spring of 1881; was then appointed pastor of St. Paul's M. E. Church in Lynn; remained three years, the full time allotted by the rules of the denomination, and in the spring of 1884 was appointed pastor in Newtonville; after serving the church there, was appointed, in 1887, to the pastorate of the first M. E. Church, Dorchester, in Boston. He served one year on the school committee in the town of Warren, and has been for several years on the Board of Visitors to the College of Liberal Arts, Boston University. In 1892 was appointed pastor of the Wesley Church, Salem, which charge he served until he was invited to become pastor of Trinity Church, Worcester, Mass., where he went in April, 1895; in April, 1898, was assigned to the pastorate of Trinity Church, Charlestown, Mass. Nov. 28, 1867, was married to Maria M. Rich, of Boston. Louis Irving Holway was born on Sept. 13, 1870; Arthur Huntington Holway, on May 3, 1874; Gilbert Raymond Holway, on June 23, 1875; Susan Florence Holway, on Jan. 5, 1878; Clarence Warren Holway was born in Warren, Oct. 1, 1880, and died in Lynn, Oct. 24, 1881; Ernest Fletcher was born in Lynn, Dec. 21, 1881.

*HORTON, HENRY KENNEY. Was born in Boston, Feb. 2, 1849; attended various private schools, including St. Paul's and Mr. E. S. Dixwell's, and was fitted for College by Mr. Arthur Sedgwick, entering with the Class in 1866; was a member of the Institute of 1770, the Δ K E and the Hasty Pudding Club. After graduation was with Bangs & Horton, wholesale coal dealers, Boston, in which firm he was a partner. In 1887 he passed six months in a voyage round the world for his health. Nov. 25, 1873, was married to Marian Glyde Bigelow. On Sept. 7, 1874, Edward Miller Horton was born; and on April 28, 1876, Kenneth Horton. He died of pneumonia, Dec. 15, 1887, aged thirty-eight years and ten months.

HOSEA, WILLIAM GOING. From graduation to Oct., 1875, resided at Cincinnati. Studied law at Cincinnati College, and received degree of LL. B. in April, 1872. Removed to New York, and resided there until May, 1888. From Jan. 1, 1878, to May 1, 1885, was a partner with William H. Waring, Class of 1852, now dead. In Sept., 1886, went into business with the New York branch of Hussey, Howe & Co., Limited, steel manufacturers, of Pittsburg. In Sept., 1887, the New York branch of the house was discontinued, and in May, 1888, returned to Cincinnati and resumed the practice of law there.

"From law suits to long suits and short suits is not far, so for the past five years instead of sleeping from term to term, have been playing whist.

"Assisted in organizing the Cincinnati Whist Club and was the first President. Was also president of the Ohio Whist Association in 1899."

Address Wiggins Block, 5th and Vine Sts., Cincinnati, O.

HUNTINGTON, ARTHUR L. Was graduated from the Harvard Law School in June, 1874, receiving degree of LL. B.; was proctor at the College; has been practising his profession at Salem, Mass.; and in Nov., 1877, formed a partnership with L. S. Tuckerman and Andrew Fitz ('70). Mr. Tuckerman withdrew from the firm in 1885, and the partnership of Huntington & Fitz was formed. For three years was a member of the City Council of Salem; was elected mayor of Salem in 1884; has been a member of the Council of the Harvard Law School Association, and chairman of the Board of Park Commissioners.

HUNTRESS, LEONARD. During the first year after graduation taught in the Riverview Military Academy, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; then studied medicine in the office of Dr. Charles A. Savory, Lowell, Mass., and in Philadelphia, attending the winter course of lectures at the Jefferson Medical College in that city; received the degree of M. D. from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York, in March, 1874; was abroad from June, 1874, to June, 1876, studying in Vienna, Strasburg, and Berlin; is practising in Lowell, Mass., where he has been a member of the school board; in 1895 was appointed by Governor Greenhalge a trustee of the State Almshouse and State Farm, and is still a member of that board. On Sept. 13, 1881, was married to Elizabeth Eaglesham, of Lowell. Elizabeth Stearns Huntress was born on May 23, 1882, and died Dec. 28, 1892; Juliette Huntress, on Jan. 17, 1886; Leonard Huntress, Jr., on Oct. 23, 1888.

JORDAN, JAMES C. After graduation was connected with the dry goods house of Jordan, Marsh & Co., of Boston. On June 18, 1873, was married to Helen L. Stevens, of Boston. Their children are Helen Stevens Jordan, born March 16, 1875; James C. Jordan, Jr., born Sept. 26, 1876; and Marion Jordan, born May 21, 1879. [From last Report. No reply received.]

KETTELL, CHARLES W. In June, 1873, was graduated from the Lawrence Scientific School, receiving the degree of S. B. summa cum laude; since then has been practising mechanical engineering in Fitchburg, and, in connection with the United States Engineer Corps, had charge of the works for the improvement of the Merrimac River; for nineteen years was connected with the George F. Blake Manufacturing Company, of Boston. He now has his own office in the Exchange Building, 53 State Street, Boston. Was married on June 1, 1886, to Fanny Russell Hawes, of Worcester; July 14, 1887, Margaret Willard Kettell was born, and Nov. 26, 1890, Russell Hawes Kettell. Residence, 19 Brewster Street, Cambridge.

KIDDER, FREDERIC. Since graduation has been engaged in the lumber business and rice planting at Wilmington, N. C.

LADD, BABSON S. From Jan. 17, 1870, to July 1, 1872, taught in the Worcester (Mass.) High School; July 8 entered the law office of Lathrop, Abbott & Jones, 13 Pemberton Square, Boston; was at the Harvard Law School four months; was admitted to the bar March 27, 1875; since January, 1876, has been practising in Boston; from October, 1883, until March, 1887, was in partnership with James R. Carret (Harvard, '67). From May, 1881, until into September, 1883, travelled in Europe with his family. On Nov. 16, 1878, was married to Ella Cora Brooks, of Milton, Mass.; and on Feb. 16, 1880, Paul Dean Ladd was born, who died Jan. 22, 1885; Alice Ladd was born Feb. 5, 1885; Amelia Ladd was born August 5, 1886; and John Wood Brooks Ladd, March 27, 1889. Office, 10 Tremont Street, Boston.

LAWRENCE, AMORY A. In September, 1870, entered the dry goods commission and manufacturing house of Lawrence & Co., Boston; admitted into the firm in February, 1871. January, 1873, was made a director of the Massachusetts National Bank; resigned in 1883, desiring to devote himself to the organization of new business, his firm having taken the Pacific Mills account; was made a director of the National Union Bank in 1887. Was made president of the Salmon Falls Manufacturing Company; also the Ipswich and Gilmanton Mills; was made a director in Dwight Manufacturing Company. In 1891 was made treasurer of the Boston Episcopal Charitable Society; in 1897 was made treasurer of the Groton Water Company; served three years during the organization of the company. By the request of the Associated Board of Trade of Boston, served during the years 1898 and 1899 as one of Mayor Quincy's advisory committee. Travelled abroad during the summers of 1872, 1889, and 1894; travelled in California in the spring of 1893. In February, 1898, went abroad with his daughter to travel, but was obliged to return in May, owing to the Cuban war. On June 1, 1871, was married to Emily Fairfax Silsbee, of Salem, Mass. Mrs. Lawrence died April 4, 1895. Amos Amory Lawrence was born Dec. 1, 1874; John Silsbee Lawrence, on Sept. 6, 1878; and Edith Lawrence, on Nov. 10, 1879. His son Amos graduated from Harvard College in the Class of 1896. His son John entered Harvard College in 1897. On June 12, 1900, was married to Gertrude M. Rice, of Boston. Office, 68 Chauncy Street. Residence, Boston.

LINCOLN, WALDO. Passed one year at the Lawrence Scientific School; Jan. 1, 1872, entered into partnership with Joseph P. Mason (formerly of '70), of Worcester, Mass., the firm carrying on business in iron and steel in Worcester; partnership dissolved March 18, 1875; engaged in the manufacture of copperas and Venetian red, with Cutter of '69, at Worcester; dissolved this partnership in 1890, and continued alone until July, 1893, when he retired, and has since had no active business; was for ten years treasurer of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute and a member of the board of trustees; from May, 1894, to June, 1896, was in Europe with his family, and since then has devoted his time to historical and genealogical studies. In April, 1898, he published "Four Generations of the Waldo Family in America," in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, and is now engaged in preparing for publication a complete genealogy of the Waldo family. Has held no political office, but was a candidate for the Electoral College on the Democratic ticket in 1884. Is a member of the American Antiquarian Society, Colonial Society of Massachusetts, New England Historic Genealogical Society, and other historical associations. Clubs: Worcester, Quinsigamond Boat and Tatnuck, Country of Worcester, Colonial of Cambridge, Union of Boston. On June 24, 1873, was married to Fanny Chandler, of Worcester, and has five children: Merrick Lincoln, born March 25, 1875; Josephine Rose Lincoln, born Feb. 28, 1878; Daniel Waldo Lincoln, born Sept. 2, 1882; George Chandler Lincoln, born August 6, 1884; Dorothy Lincoln, born March 4, 1890. Address, Worcester, Mass.

LITTLEFIELD, GEORGE S. Studied law, a portion of the time at the Harvard Law School, until Oct. 4, 1872, when he was admitted to the bar; is practising in Boston; Dec. 24, 1872, was made a justice of the peace for Middlesex County; on Feb. 16, 1875, notary public; and in November, 1875, was made trial justice for the same county; appointed special justice of the Fourth District Court of Eastern Middlesex, at its opening, July, 1882, and still holds that office. Was chairman of school committee of Winchester, and had nineteen years of service on the board; is historian of the Winchester Historical and Genealogical Society, and has held the position since its establishment. On June 29, 1874, was married to Georgiana Stevens, of Somerville, Mass.; on Sept. 19, 1876, Anna Sherman Littlefield was born; and Arthur Stevens Littlefield, Sept. 19, 1880. Is a member of the Calumet Club of Winchester. Residence, Winchester, Mass; office, 27 State Street, Boston.

* LORING, FRED W. Was born Dec. 12, 1849, in Boston. His parents were David and Mary Hall (Stodder) Loring. He entered College from the Phillips Academy, Andover, in 1866, and was graduated with the Class. Having chosen journalism as his profession, he devoted himself to that work, contributing articles to several of the leading periodicals; some of his writings were issued in book form. In 1871 he accompanied a United States expedition to the West, as correspondent of "Appletons' Journal;" and while on this expedition was killed by the Apache-Mohave Indians, the stage on which he was travelling being attacked a short distance from Wickenburg, Arizona, and all but two of the occupants murdered. This occurred Nov. 6, 1871. His age was twenty-one years and nine months.

* LOW, ETHELBERT MILLS. Was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 1, 1848, and was the eldest son of Josiah O. Low and Martha Elizabeth (Mills) Low. His early school life was passed at the Brooklyn Collegiate and Polytechnic Institute; at the age of fifteen he was obliged to leave school on account of ill health, and his studies were continued under private tutors. During his preparation for College he gave great attention to his health, and by careful and diligent practice in and out of the gymnasium, he came to Harvard strong and well; this practice he continued faithfully through college, and easily took rank among the best oarsmen, boxers, and gymnasts of his time. He was a faithful and conscientious student; was a member of the Institute of 1770, the Δ K E and O K societies, and the Hasty Pudding Club; and at the beginning of his Junior year he accepted the position of captain of the University Crew, but after a few weeks, yielding to the advice of his family and physician, resigned and gave up college boating. Soon after graduation, he travelled around the world with his father, mother, and sister. Upon his return home in the fall of 1871, he entered the business house of A. A. Low & Brothers, and in a short time was placed at the head of their tea department. Jan. 1, 1875, he became a member of that firm, and continued so up to the time of his death. While giving the strictest attention to business, he yet found time for other duties and for a large amount of reading, the very good library he had in his College room in Garden Street having become an excellent one at his home in Brooklyn; he kept himself well informed upon all literary and scientific matters, and his familiarity with almost every subject that might arise in course of conversation was a striking characteristic. He gave much time to the study of languages and to music; he was an active member, and for some while president of the leading Brooklyn Glee Club; he was secretary of the Art Association of Brooklyn, and a prominent and busy member of the Hamilton Literary Society. He took a great interest in politics; and he was one of the leaders in the movement for municipal reform in Brooklyn, which resulted (since his death) in the election of his cousin and business partner, Mr. Seth Low, to the mayoralty. In every way he was a gentleman, quiet and dignified. His letters (private and public) and his conversation were brilliant, entertaining, and witty; he had a genuine love for fun, and was a favorite in every social circle. Low married, June 6, 1878, Mary L. Ide, of Brooklyn. He purchased a house in Grace Court, near his father's residence; and here his only child, Ethelbert Ide Low, was born April 25,

1880. Both wife and son survive him. Soon after his return from abroad in 1871, he became troubled with dyspepsia; by care and exercise he kept himself for the most of the year in good health, but often in March was obliged to leave his business. During the last two years of his life he was not so well, which in part may have been due to an accident while riding, which deprived him of the full use of one wrist, and thus of the exercise so essential to him. In February, 1881, he caught a severe cold after singing in a concert. Not ridding himself of it readily, he went to a favorite place at the seashore for change of air and out-of-door life. At first he improved, but again taking cold he became much run down, and returned to Brooklyn. On April 28, by the advice of his physicians, he went to Philadelphia to place himself under the care of Drs. Mitchell and Sinkler. Again everything looked promising for him, when his digestion failed him, and he was taken to Atlantic City. Here, in July, he was suddenly taken with bowel trouble, and was carried back to Philadelphia, where he died a week later, at four o'clock in the afternoon of July 29, 1881. His funeral took place from his father's house in Brooklyn, August 1, 1881. He was buried in Greenwood Cemetery. From an obituary notice, written by an old friend, who had known Low intimately since graduation, the few lines following are taken: —

"The pride and joy of his family circle, he was a devoted son and brother, and a most affectionate husband and father. As he took leave finally of the near and dear ones, the scene was very touching, while yet the emaciated sufferer was calm and triumphant. He was willing and glad to go, if such was the mind of his Heavenly Father. It was the evident will of God; and so, saying his last adieus to those who were standing at his bedside, sending messages of love to absent friends and relatives, and asking that his infant son should be brought up to be a God-fearing man, he passed peacefully away. He had already realized a strong and well-rounded character. His manhood, like his youth, was stainless; and for all the devotion and care which parents had extended to him in his education and training, he returned, in all that he was and did, a full measure of reward, pressed down and running over."

*LOWELL, PERCEVAL. Was born in Newark, N. J., Nov. 13, 1850, the eldest son of Robert Traill Spence (Harvard, '33) and Mary Anne (Duane) Lowell; was prepared for College at the Cambridge High School, entering with the Class in 1866. After graduation he engaged in the railroad business, in which he continued until compelled by ill health to resign his position on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway. During the sixteen years devoted to this work, he occupied the following important positions: until April 1, 1874, was cashier and paymaster of the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad, at Burlington, Iowa, and secretary and auditor of the Quincy, Alton and St. Louis Railway Company, at Quincy, Ill.; Streator, Ill., April 1, 1874, auditor and general ticket agent of the Chicago, Pekin, and South Western Railroad; Omaha, May 3, 1876, general ticket agent of the Burlington and Missouri Railway, in Nebraska, and leased lines; Nov. 1, 1876, acting general freight agent of the same; Nov. 1, 1877, general freight and ticket agent of the same; March 17, 1879, "in the absence of the general manager, all matters connected with the interests of the road will be referred to Perceval Lowell, general freight agent, who will have jurisdiction;" June 1, 1880, assistant general manager of the same; May 13, 1881, general passenger and ticket agent, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway; Oct. 1, 1886, resigned his office, being in southern California on account of ill health. Lowell died on Dec. 9, 1887.

From an article in the Boston "Transcript," of Feb. 17, 1888, the following interesting extracts have been taken: —

"Perceval Lowell died a few weeks since of consumption, in southern California. Some words about him are called for by his many friends, thousands of miles asunder, and may be not unwelcome to others; for he was one of those who live for more than themselves, and who leave a worthy example. Though young he had achieved in a short life a wider influence than common, and greater than common success in his work, which beforehand might have been thought not very congenial to him, and had won respect from those who had dealings with him and love of those who knew him, both more and stronger than common.

"From his earliest childhood, in Newark, N. J. (where his father, the author of 'The New Priest,' had a parish), and next in a rural parish in New York, he was always manly and trusty, and a champion of the younger and weaker. He was believed in and referred to, at his early schools, by children and teachers alike. Later, at the Cambridge High School, preparing for Harvard, and afterwards at the University, he was, during the term-time of each year, under the tutelage of his aunt, the late well-known Mrs. Anna Cabot Lowell.

"From home influences, and school and University, high-spirited, generous, well-bred, with a fine taste, and a cultivated love of thoughtful and scholarly reading, and taking to himself gladly, as a rule of life, the knowledge that, under God, he must win his own success by his own character and work, he went, at his graduation in 1870, to the West. He had chosen for the business of his life railroad work, in which was offered him a place to begin not far from the bottom, as he was more than ready to do.

"Beginning, then, where he could find a place, he was moved about in the first years, as a young man must be, from one post to another, but continually gained in estimation, and was advanced to trusts beyond his years. Experience showed that to his strength of character and attractiveness of manners were added remarkable and rare abilities for business and dealing with men. His power of mastering and accomplishing work was wonderful, as is probably the case with all very successful men.

"It was described by one who had seen it with the eyes of an expert, — a well-known railroad man, — referring to the greatness of the loss inflicted by Mr. Lowell's withdrawal for ill health, 'He did the work of two men; he could and he did. No one else could keep up with it.'

"But all along, beside what was seen and approved of, in his own department was a great deal that was unknown, and, as need not be said, unpaid, but especially characteristic of him. More than one man was brought out of the despair of tangled and broken accounts by the intelligent work, through long nights, of his free-hearted young neighbor; and many a youth has been set forward by him, and cheered on or checked, and has been shown a good way. His own words give the rule by which he acted: 'I suppose there 's nothing better, while we 're in this world, than to help others as much as we can.'

. . . . . .

"To the last he was thoughtful for others, not for himself. To the last he was making new and warm friends. One of these, who was with him at the end, wrote: 'If I were to express one hope for the future of my little son, it would be that he might, some day, make as true a man and as perfect a gentleman as Mr. Perceval Lowell.' So 'qualis ab incepto processit, servabatur ad imum.'

"He passed away gently, in the faith and hope of a Christian man. God give him rest eternal!"

LUNT, HORACE G. Studied law in Chicago; was admitted to the bar Jan. 10, 1873; practised law in Chicago until January, 1886, when ill health compelled him to abandon both his profession and home. Resided a year at San José, Cal.; afterwards went to Colorado, and at present is living in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Appointed by the governor judge of the District Court of the Fourth Judicial District of Colorado, Jan. 24, 1895. Elected, November, 1895, for six year term as such judge. Resigned May 3, 1899, and resumed the practice of law at Colorado Springs. Clubs: the El Paso Club, Colorado Springs; the Town and Gown Golf Club, Colorado Springs; the University Club, Denver, Colo.; the Chicago Club, Chicago, Ill. Degree M. A., Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., in 1878. Sept. 3, 1874, was married to Caroline K. Isaacs, of Chicago. The births of their children have been as follows: Horace F. Lunt, June 3, 1875; Nina M. Lunt, June 7, 1877; Regina Lunt, Oct. 1, 1879; Carolyn Lunt, Feb. 8, 1884; Lawrence K. Lunt, June 12, 1886.

*McCALL, HARRY WILCOCKS. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4, 1849. His father, Harry McCall, born in Louisiana, was of a Scotch family that came from Glasgow to the United States in 1700. On the mother's side the father was Welsh, of the family of Evan Jones, who had first settled in Pennsylvania, but afterwards moved to Louisiana and bought the plantation named Evan Hall, now passed by inheritance to the McCalls, and often known by their name. His mother, Charlotte Manigault Wilcocks, was born at Clifton, Pa., on the Delaware River. The Wilcockses came from England to Pennsylvania. The Manigaults (his mother's family) are a Huguenot stock, originally settled in South Carolina.

McCall was prepared for College in Philadelphia, mostly under private instruction by R. W. Chase, a Harvard graduate, and —— Preston ——. He entered Princeton College in 1867 as Sophomore, and remained there until the middle of Junior year; then spent a few months in Cambridge, with Anthony Hill as tutor, and was admitted to the Senior Class at June examinations of 1869, and was graduated in 1870. He obtained for the year 83 per cent. of the attainable marks, and was ranked 36 in a class of 130. He took no post-graduate course, but spent three years abroad in travel and desultory study.

In 1873, for the first time, he went to Louisiana, to take part in the management of the large sugar estate of his family on the Mississippi River, 80 miles above New Orleans. After the death of his father, in 1886, the responsibility of direction descended to him, though shared by cousins who had inherited from another brother. Every winter, from 1873, he spent from four to six months in this work, until the condition of the Southern States and the interests of the negroes became very strong factors in his thoughts and life. In this connection he was appointed a member of the "Church Commission for Work among Colored People;" he always attended its meetings and labored earnestly for its ends, as the resolutions passed by that body at his death strongly testify.

His summers were passed in the North, mainly at his home, One Oak, Germantown, Pa. He married, Oct. 1, 1878, Phebe Warren, second daughter of Edward Ingersoll, Esq., of Germantown, who survives him. His leisure was largely devoted to reading, especially in history, theology, and sociology. His active energies were much given to St. Luke's Church in Germantown, of which he was a warden, to various public charities, and to the work of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, of whose convention he was a member. How zealously and effectively he worked for these objects is shown in a remarkable obituary notice in the New York "Churchman" of June 24, 1894, signed by Samuel Upjohn, rector of the parish, who speaks with great directness, emphasis, and feeling, for the vestry and congregation, as well as for himself.

He died at his Germantown home, June 18, 1894, in his forty-sixth year.

McCall was not given to publicity, and his private life can ill be told in a brief public notice. But worth and nobility of character were expressed in extraordinary degree in his blameless, stainless life. A gentleman of Nature's making and God's training, he added high culture of intellect to refinement of manners, and to these an extreme loyalty to duty in every relation.

In howsoever quiet lives exhibited, these qualities should in every way be held up for example and praise. This ideal is truly an academic one, and any University that produces men of McCall's type of strength and beauty — mental, moral, spiritual — may rightly be proud of her sons.

McMICHAEL, CHARLES B. Began the study of law in September, 1870, and was admitted to the bar in Philadelphia, on May 25, 1872, where he now practises; office, 217 South Sixth Street. In November, 1875, was offered the position of First Assistant United States Attorney, but declined. In 1881 was appointed solicitor for the Guardians of the Poor. Held this position for two years, and was then promoted and given charge of the preparation and trial of all cases to which the city of Philadelphia was a party brought in Court of Common Pleas. By gradual promotion attained the position of First Assistant City Solicitor, and had under his supervision a large amount of litigation, including the preparation and trial of suits both at law and equity in the courts of Common Pleas, besides having under his supervision the litigation in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in which the city of Philadelphia was a party.

Was appointed judge of the Court of Common Pleas, No. 3, of the First Judicial District of Pennsylvania, by the Governor of Pennsylvania, 5 March, 1896, and in November, 1896, unanimously elected for a term of ten years from the first Monday of January, 1897; and is president of the Harvard Club of Philadelphia.

Published a "Digest of Statutes and Adjudicated Cases relating to the Municipal Law of the City of Philadelphia."

In September, 1892, resigned the position of First Assistant City Solicitor, and resumed private practice.

On June 7, 1877, was married to Anna Mallet Prevost; on Feb. 18, 1879, Caroline Sutherland McMichael was born, and on May 22, 1887, Charles Prevost McMichael was born.

MANN, B. PICKMAN. Entomologist to government of Brazil, January to June, 1871, under special commission. Lecturer and instructor in entomology and botany, 1872 to 1880, including a term in botany at Bowdoin College in 1877, and in entomology at Martha's Vineyard Summer Institute in 1878. Secretary of numerous entomological societies almost continually during same period. Sole editor of "Psyche," the monthly magazine and organ of the Cambridge Entomological Club, 1874 to 1876, and managing and bibliographical editor, 1877 to 1885. For one year president of this club. Recorder and computer at Harvard College Observatory early in 1879, and again in 1880. Opened a private school in Boston with an associate in 1879, but soon withdrew; filled temporary positions as instructor at Dudley School, Roxbury, and at Roxbury Latin School in 1880. From 1881 to 1886, assistant entomologist and assistant in Entomological Division of U. S. Department of Agriculture, engaged mostly in bibliographical work; in early part of 1887, in charge of rearranging and cataloguing the library of that department. From August, 1886, to July, 1887, examiner in U. S. Civil Service Commission. In May, 1887, took examination for reëntry into civil service, passing at highest percentage ever attained. Resigned from Commission, July 31, 1887; refused clerkship in Post Office Department in August; accepted clerkship in War Department in September; resigned that in October to accept appointment as assistant examiner in Patent Office, where he now is. Was an organizer of the Civic Centre of the city of Washington, D. C., and chairman of its Committee on Pauperism; was for several years vice-president of the Charity Organization Society of the District of Columbia; has been a member and the secretary of the Board of Children's Guardians of the District of Columbia from the organization of the board, appointed originally in 1892, reappointed in 1894 and 1897; was for several years also disbursing officer of the board; these services all gratuitous. Is member of Philosophical, Biological, and Entomological Societies of Washington, life member of American Library Association, life fellow of American Association for the Advancement of Science, and member of numerous other technical and scientific societies. Established several kindergartens for the children of the poor in Washington, collecting and managing the funds therefor, for seven years, until public kindergartens were established. Has been secretary of the Columbian Kindergarten Association since its organization in 1892.

Has been, since the organization of the "People's Church," in 1892, a trustee of the church; was president of the congregation in 1893 and 1894, and became treasurer in 1899.

Has been since 1887 treasurer of the People's Real Estate Tontine, of New York City, a philanthropic organization for the prevention of poverty in old age.

On July 12, 1878, was married to Louisa C. F. Van de Sande. Has no children. Residence, 1918 Sunderland Place, Washington, D. C. Retains his citizenship in Cambridge, Mass.

*MERRICK, WILLIAM. Was born in Springfield, Mass., Sept. 10, 1849; was the son of Solyman and Anne Sophia (Clapp) Merrick. Was prepared for College at Professor Charlier's French School in New York, entering with the Class in 1866.

He was a member of the Φ B K, Π H, and Natural History Society. The following account of Merrick's life is taken from the "Springfield Republican" of Jan. 18, 1887: —

"After leaving College, he took a course in architecture at the Boston Institute of Technology. He was a good musician, an accomplished French scholar, and generally a well-educated man. Since his school and college work was completed, he has lived quietly at home taking care of his property and managing some special trusts. He was a man of exceptionally retiring and modest disposition, not at all fond of society, and content to live within a small circle; but to those few who knew him intimately he manifested many most attractive and admirable traits. He seemed to be peculiarly qualified for offices of trust, and was the soul of honor and uprightness. Methodical, thorough, and well balanced, he managed his own and the interests of others intrusted to him with ability, conservatism, care, and precision. He always gave generously to good causes that appealed to him. He was fond of his College associations, and kept up a close intimacy with a few of his classmates.

"Mr. Merrick retained his father's large interest in the gas company, and a year ago was elected treasurer, to succeed the late J. D. Brewer. He enjoyed the duties that the position gave him, and discharged them well. He was a director of the John Hancock Bank, and a director and on the finance committee of the City Library, in which he was much interested, and for the endowment of which he had promised fifteen hundred dollars when the full amount of sixty thousand dollars should be completed. For a time he was also a trustee of the City Hospital, and was a member and trustee of the Winthrop Club. He was one of the syndicate that recently bought the Bliss lot, next to the City Library, to save it for a park. He grew up in the Unitarian Church, usually attended its services, and gave liberally for its support. Altogether, though so quiet a person, he was a valuable member of society, and was becoming more and more so. His death is therefore a real loss to the community."

Merrick died suddenly on Jan. 17, 1887, of congestion of the brain. The following extract from his will (which was made up largely of charitable bequests) will be of interest: —

"To the President and Fellows of Harvard College, a corporation established by law, its successors and assigns, I give and bequeath the sum of five thousand dollars, to found a scholarship, the income of said sum of five thousand dollars to be paid to some meritorious undergraduate, descendants of members of the Class of 1870 to have the preference."

* MITCHELL, CHARLES LUCIUS. Was born in Cincinnati, O., Aug. 31, 1850. His parents were Thomas Greene and Martha Elizabeth Mitchell. He fitted for College at the private school of Andrew J. Rickoff and entered with the Class in 1866. Mitchell died of typhoid pneumonia on June 21, 1898, at Oakland, California, where he had resided for three years. He was only nineteen when we were graduated. After travelling in Europe during that summer he went to Dresden in the fall, and there studied for two years. Then returning he entered the law school of the Cincinnati College, and in the spring of 1874 took its degree, was admitted to the bar, and at once entered upon an active practice in Cincinnati as the partner of his grandfather, Charles D. Coffin, then one of the leading lawyers of Ohio. Mitchell was eminently fitted for the law, and success soon came to him. The reports of the decisions of the Supreme Court of Ohio rendered between 1875 and 1883 bear witness to the number and importance of the causes in which he was employed as well as to his success in them. Before either court or jury his fluent and graceful diction, his ready grasp of the controlling points of his case, and his logical power of statement made him so effective that in three or four years he had taken a front place among the younger members of the local bar. In June, 1879, he married Mary Elizabeth Holmes, the younger daughter of D. H. Holmes, of Holmesdale, Kentucky, and spent the latter half of that year in travel in the far East, mostly in Japan. In the following year he became interested in a gold mining venture in northern Georgia, in which he gradually embarked more and more of his means and to it gave more and more of his time until, in 1882, all he had was involved, and with the hope of saving something he gave up the practice of his profession and went to Georgia to take personal management of the mine, but was not able to prevent a total loss. On the death of his grandfather in 1880, he had formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, D. H. J. Holmes, and after the mining venture began to divert his attention from his practice, his classmate Perkins took charge of his more important litigation, and for a time they had their offices together, until Mitchell finally gave up the law entirely. In 1883 he lost his wife, to whom he had been devotedly attached. She was constantly with him at the mining camp in Georgia, and at the time of her death they were at Holmesdale on a visit, intending to return to the mine, but he never afterward did so. She had shared his love of flowers, and together they had cultivated roses as a pastime. For many months after her death he avoided his old associates and spent most of his time in his rosery. The following year he built large greenhouses at Oakley, O., near Cincinnati, and went into the growing of roses for the market on an extensive scale. For some time the business seemed to prosper, but the local demand for his product was irregular, and after a time it became apparent that he could not compete with the more economical methods of smaller growers, and in 1891, after a hard struggle to make the venture profitable, he gave it up. Then for a year or two he held a position in the federal revenue service, where he made a local reputation by the correction of some time-honored abuses which his integrity and accuracy as an accountant could not tolerate, but needing a wider field, he moved with his family to California in 1895, and subsequently, through the influence of his classmate Morse, became the agent at San Francisco of the United States Trust and Guaranty Co. of Baltimore. By industry and ability in this work he soon became the general agent of his company for the State of California, and afterward was made its manager for the Pacific Coast. While on a visit to Oregon in April, 1898, for the appointment of local agents, he contracted the disease which caused his death. According to some tests his life was not successful, but when judged by the highest standards it was full of achievement greater than any which brings only the common measure of success. In every relation he did his duty. There never was a better son, husband, or father. No client's interests ever suffered in his hands. No obligation of citizenship was ever shirked by him. In the face of repeated financial misfortune, he never lost heart or became embittered. That temperate hopefulness which is born of a clean conscience and good courage enabled him always to shed upon his family and friends the light of his happy disposition. In a letter written a few weeks before his death, he said : —

"I have never been able to satisfy myself that any human being can have any knowledge as to what his future state is likely to be, but I am entirely satisfied that if you try to be upright and charitable to your fellow men, without bothering yourself about a future which you cannot know and which was probably hidden from you for some wise reason, you stand a very good chance of fair treatment by this world, and that is about all we have any right to expect."

In 1887 he contracted his second marriage with May Suter, of Cincinnati, by whom he had five children, two girls and three boys, all of whom, and his widow, survive him. His eldest son, Daniel Holmes Mitchell, the child of his first marriage, is now at the Pomfret School, and expects to enter College in a year or two.

MONROE, CHARLES. Until January, 1871, taught school in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; in the spring of 1871 went to Leavenworth, Kans., and entered upon the study of law; was admitted to the bar Dec. 16, 1872; in July, 1873, entered the office of Mr. T. A. Hurd, and in January, 1875, became a partner in the firm of Hurd & Monroe; Oct. 1, 1875, was appointed assistant attorney of the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, at Kansas City, Mo.; in May, 1876, moved to Lawrence, Kans., retaining his position with the Kansas Pacific Railway Company; on May 1, 1887, was appointed assistant general attorney of the Kansas division of the Union Pacific Railway Company, and at the same time moved to Topeka, Kans. Jan. 1, 1891, resigned as assistant general attorney of the Kansas Division of the Union Pacific Railway Company, and moved to Los Angeles, California, and became a member of the law firm of Wells, Monroe & Lee; continued the practice of the law in that firm until October, 1893, when he formed a partnership with Stephen M. White, under the firm name of White & Monroe; since April, 1899, has been practising by himself. Address, 416 Douglas Building, Los Angeles, Cal. On March 18, 1880, was married to Ella Chartis Hadley, of Lawrence.

MORISON, ERNEST N. Was at one time a member of the firm of Morison & Williams, general commission merchants, Baltimore, Md., and afterward in the wool commission business; was then the agent for the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company in Baltimore. Is now a stock broker, firm of E. N. Morison & Co., Baltimore. On Oct. 31, 1871, was married to Priscilla Ridgely White. On Sept. 24, 1872, N. H. Morison, Jr., was born; Jan. 24, 1874, Charles Ridgely White; in 1876, Sidney Brown; in 1878, Rebecca Angelica; in 1881, Ernest; in 1883, Henry White; in 1886, William George; in August 1889, Allison; and in May, 1891, Robert Brown. [From last Report. No reply received.]

MORSE, GODFREY. After graduation studied law, receiving the degree of LL. B. at the Harvard Law School in June, 1872; during some of the winter months taught English Literature and Arithmetic in the Boston Public Evening High School; was admitted at the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, July 22, 1873, and at the United States Circuit Court, Oct. 2, 1874; is a justice of the peace and a notary public. Feb. 3, 1879, was admitted to the bar of the United States Supreme Court at Washington. During the years 1876, 1877, and 1878 was a member of the School Committee of the city of Boston; 1882 and 1883 was a member of the Common Council of the city of Boston; June 18, 1883, was elected president of the Common Council of the city of Boston; 1882, 1883, and 1884 was assistant counsel of the United States in the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims; March 11, 1885, was appointed a member of the Board of Court-House Commissioners for the erection of the new court-house for the city of Boston and county of Suffolk; 1887 was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the Boston Dental College; September, 1896, was a member of the National Democratic Convention which met at Indianapolis; 1897 and 1898 was chairman of the Massachusetts State Committee of the National Democratic party, as well as chairman of the City Committee of the City of Boston of the National Democratic party; is president of the Leopold Morse Home, vice-president of the Boston Home for Incurables, a director in a number of other charitable corporations. Has visited Europe a number of times, and in 1895 made a trip to the Orient, visiting the principal Mediterranean ports, travelled to California in 1897, and visited Italy the present year; is a director of the Mexican Telephone Company, the Allouez Mining Company; is a member of the University Club of Boston, Boston Athletic Club, Elysium Club, and of a number of other associations in Boston, and a member of the Criterion Club of New York. Practises law at 53 State Street, Boston, with L. M. Friedman, of Harvard, 1893, under the name of Morse & Friedman.

NORCROSS, OTIS. After graduation was engaged in studying law; received the degree of LL. B. from the Harvard Law School in June, 1873; was admitted to the bar in September, 1873; is practising in Boston, in partnership with his brother, Grenville Howland Norcross ('75), under firm name of O. & G. H. Norcross. Was married, Jan. 20, 1881, to Susannah Ruggles Plympton, daughter of the late Henry Plympton, of Boston. Residence, 249 Marlborough Street. Office, 35 Congress Street, Boston.

NOURSE, FRANKLIN. From graduation until September, 1871, was in the machine shop of the Saco Water Power Company, at Biddeford, Me.; then passed a year in the various departments of the Bates Mills, Lewiston, Me.; on returning to Biddeford, entered the draughting room of the Saco Water Power Company's machine shop; was afterwards connected with the Masconomet Mills, at Newburyport, Mass., and the Washington Print Works, at Philadelphia; has been engaged in manufacturing and mill engineering at Waterville and Biddeford, Me.; November, 1877, took charge of the Barker Mills, Auburn, Me.; March 1, 1879, took the agency of the Lawrence Duck Company, Lawrence, Mass.; April 1, 1880, took the agency of the York Manufacturing Company, at Saco, Me.; is now at Lowell, Mass., as agent of the Lawrence Manufacturing Company. On Sept. 12, 1878, was married to Edith Frances Riversmith; on June 17, 1879, Benjamin Franklin Nourse, 2d, was born; and on March 19, 1881, Edith Frances Nourse.

NYE, CHARLES F. After graduation studied law in New York, and was admitted to the bar June 11, 1875, and is practising in Champlain, N. Y. Is a member of the University Club of New York, the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of New York, and the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of New York.

PARKMAN, HENRY. After graduation studied and attended University lectures for one year; then entered the Harvard Law School; was proctor at the College; received the degree of LL. B. in June, 1873, and of A. M., June, 1874; practised law in Boston until June, 1895, and is a public administrator for the county of Suffolk; June, 1895, became treasurer of the Provident Institution for Savings in the Town of Boston, with office at 36 Temple Place. Was six years (1879–1884) a member of the Common Council of the city of Boston, and for some years secretary, and subsequently on two separate occasions president of the Republican City Committee of Boston. Represented Ward 9 of Boston for three years (1886–87–88) in the House of Representatives, and was Senator from the Fifth Suffolk District in 1892 and 1893. Is now chairman of the Prison Commission of Massachusetts. Married Aug. 21, 1890, to Mary Frances Parker, of Newark, N. J. Has five children: Mary Elizabeth, born July 24, 1891; Edith Wolcott, born Oct. 28, 1892; Henry, born April 26, 1894; Penelope Frances, born April 12, 1896; Francis, born Feb. 26, 1898. Was secretary of the Alumni Association of Harvard College from 1884 to 1896.

PARRISH, SAMUEL L. Studied law for two years in Philadelphia, and was admitted to the bar on July 1, 1872; immediately thereafter sailed for Europe, passing somewhat over a year in study and travel in Europe; returned in October, 1873, and practised in Philadelphia; removed to New York in 1877, continuing practice; was for many years associated with Pendleton ('70) under the firm name of Parrish & Pendleton, 44 and 46 Broadway; retired from active practice in 1897, continuing his offices with Pendleton at the above address.

PARSONS, THEOPHILUS. In October, 1870, entered the Lyman Mills, Holyoke, Mass., to study the manufacture of cotton cloth, and on Oct. 9, 1873, was appointed superintendent; passed the summer of 1873 in Europe; Jan. 1, 1880, was appointed agent of the Pocasset Manufacturing Company, Fall River, Mass.; Sept. 1, 1880, appointed agent of Lyman Mills, Holyoke, Mass.; Oct. 1, 1884, appointed treasurer of Lyman Mills. Aug. 15, 1894, was married to Mary Mason Oliver; July 28, 1895, Susan Lawrence Parsons was born. Mrs. Parsons is not now living. Is a member of the A. D., Somerset, Myopia, and Eastern Yacht clubs. Address, 53 State Street, Boston.

PEARSON, GEORGE. Admitted to practise law in the courts of Mercer County, Penn., Dec. 9, 1872. Admitted to practise in the Supreme and Superior courts of Pennsylvania, Oct. 23, 1893. Practised as attorney at law at Mercer, Penn., firm of Johnson Pearson & Son, until appointment as prothonotary of Supreme Court; now resides in Pittsburg, Penn.; was clerk of the Pennsylvania Senate during the winters of 1876 and 1877; was reading clerk of the House of Representatives, 1881; reading clerk of the Senate, 1883; chief clerk of the House of Representatives, 1885; reëlected, session 1887, which position he resigned, Jan. 19, 1887, to accept appointment as private secretary of Gov. James A. Beaver; was chief secretary of Republican State Committee during the years 1882–85 inclusive. On July 13, 1892, was appointed prothonotary of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania for the Western District, at Pittsburg, Penn.; on Oct. 14, 1875, was married to Jessie Patton. Johnson Patton Pearson was born May 13, 1877, and died Jan. 11, 1878; Helen Pearson was born March 13, 1879. Jessie Patton Pearson died June 2, 1889. On Nov. 15, 1892, was married to Helen Hester Hume, of Houlton, Me. Alice Hume Pearson was born Sept. 1, 1893.

PEELE, WILLARD S. Has passed much of the time since graduation in travelling abroad. Residence, Boston. [From last Report. No reply received.]

PENDLETON, FRANK K. Travelled abroad for about three years, spending some time in studying French and German; on his return entered the Harvard Law School; after completing his course went to New York, where he is practising with Parrish ('70). June 24, 1885, married Sarah, daughter of Camille Marié, of New York. Early in 1886 Mrs. Pendleton died of pneumonia. In December, 1890, married Elizabeth La Montagne. On August 9, 1895, a son was born. Address, 7 East 86th Street.

* PERKINS, JAMES HANDASYD. Was born in Cincinnati, February 20, 1848, the fifth and youngest son of James H. and Sarah (Elliott) Perkins, and died at Cincinnati, December 2, 1889.

Of his life, after graduation, his own record in the last Report is as follows: "Was engaged in studying law in Cincinnati until April, 1872, when he received the degree of LL. B. at the Law School of the Cincinnati College; is now practising in Cincinnati. Was married on May 10, 1887, to Mary Longworth Stettinius, of Cincinnati."

These few lines, characteristic in their brevity and reserve, convey the essential facts of his career as he viewed it; the profession in which his rare intellectual powers found constant delight, and the marriage in which he found a perfect happiness. In these there was a satisfaction so complete, that those public honors, which might have enlarged the record, he put aside as often as they sought him. To his own words there remains but to add the record of his death, still so difficult to realize even by those who were nearest to him in his last days.

Remarkable as were Perkins's intellectual grasp, his mental alertness, his fearless honesty, these were fully matched by the charm of his personality. It was quite irresistible to all sorts and conditions of men, because it was absolutely sincere. He did not "descend to meet," because what was best in others arose to meet him. He made men conscious of his clear insight, of his absolute justice, but also of his nobility of heart, of his surpassing tenderness. If it was easy to love him, and if he gave much, and to many in return, he gave all to his friends. He had a supreme faculty for friendship. There played about his intimate intercourse the full measure of all his powers. The perfect saneness of his mind, his gifts of memory, of close reasoning, and of luminous statement, the refinement of his taste, and above all his wonderful humor and affectionateness, all contributed to the charm of that lost companionship. He seemed so full of abounding life, that the shock of his sudden death was little softened by his long illness. The obscure nervous disease which finally exhausted the action of his heart kept him absent from his practice, and much of the time abroad, for his last two years, but did not impair, even to the very end, the impression of the fulness of life which was in him.

One of the many public tributes to his memory may appropriately find place here in the following, from the proceedings of the bar at the meeting called upon his death: —

"James H. Perkins had the gifts of quick and clear perception, of accurate analysis, of ready application to the concrete of the abstract principles of law and reason. He had learning. He had the power of close and continuous application. He was faithful. He was alert. He was diligent in business. Yet none of these traits, perhaps, — few of them, at least, taken singly, — were more marked in him than they commonly are in the better class of his profession. But they were so harmoniously developed and adjusted by perfect growth, that he had the nice symmetry of mind which gives both delicacy and power, like the trip-hammer, which can crack a nut or weld a beam.

"But what gives dominant color and force to the picture was his honesty. Not merely the honesty which will not wrongfully take or keep; which will not make or endure a lie, nor rest for an instant under the shadow of deceit; which will not see any one denied his just due. Such honesty he had in the perfection which is the crown of every true lawyer, whether he sit on bench or stand at bar. But he had more. He had an honest mind. This is the gift of God, not always bestowed, nor always kept, in a profession so full of open temptations, and of the subtle and more insidious influences of which we are scarcely conscious. It is one of the priceless gems with which God has endowed humanity. "The gold and the crystal cannot equal it, and the exchange of it shall not be for jewels of fine gold." It cannot be imitated nor replaced. From it shine wisdom and truth.

"I think our 'Jim' Perkins had one of the most honest intellects I ever knew. It was set as true as the axis of a planet. It seemed to know neither variableness nor shadow of turning. Not that he never erred, for he was human; but his reason never shirked through prejudice, nor swerved for interest, nor shrank from fear. He took his premises truthfully; he followed faithfully to the conclusion; he accepted the result without regard to consequence.

"This made him one of the best men I ever knew to talk with in doubt or trouble. Not only was his immediate aid great, his guidance sure, but it was like keying one's mind by the eternal verities to reason with him. His mind would respond clear and true as an echo in the mountains. We should get sadly out of tune if that class of men were to perish from the earth.

"And with it all he had a big and open heart. He was not mean nor miserly of his powers. How often he has stood touchstone for a friend uncertain of an argument or doubtful of a course, many of us know in part.

"He was one of the few lawyers I have known who was always and actively a friend of the court, a true brother to his brethren. He had little pride of opinion. He knew neither jealousy nor envy. He was never greedy of credit for success, nor liberal of responsibility for failure. If one can be generous to a fault, he was. If it be in human nature to be glad at losing a bad case, he could be. If a lawyer can be too fair, he was.

"Why such a noble soul should find the bitterness of affliction in the brightest cup of human joy, why such beauty of mind and strength of body should be stricken in the very noonday of their prime, is one of the mysteries of God. But the beneficence of his memory will abide with us to the end."

PERRIN, WILLARD T. Sept. 16, 1870, was appointed a sub-master in the Boston Latin School, where he taught during the school year; Sept. 13, 1871, entered the School of Theology, Boston University, and was graduated May 27, 1874, with the degree of B. D.; in the summer of 1873 went to California with the United States Fish Commission; in April, 1874, was admitted to the New England Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and began preaching at Allston, Mass.; April 9, 1876, was ordained deacon by Bishop M. Simpson; and, April 7, 1878, elder, by Bishop W. L. Harris; April 12, 1876, was stationed at Wilbraham, Mass., the seat of the Wesleyan Academy. Was married to L. Nellie Denton, of West Newton, April 12, 1876. In April, 1879, was stationed at the State Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Springfield, Mass., where he remained three years; since which time his appointments have been: April, 1882, to the Monument Square Church, Charlestown, Mass.; April, 1885, to the Trinity Church, Worcester, Mass.; and, April, 1888, to the Worthen Street Church, Lowell, Mass., where he remained three years. In 1891 and '92, Mr. and Mrs. Perrin spent over nine months abroad, visiting Great Britain, the Continent of Europe, Greece, Constantinople, Egypt, and the Holy Land. In April, 1892, was appointed pastor of the St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church at South Boston, Mass. After a five years' pastorate in South Boston, April, 1897, was appointed pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Boston. April, 1899, was appointed pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Dorchester, but in October, 1899, was appointed presiding elder of Boston District, which involves the oversight of sixty-three churches. In January, 1885, upon nomination by the Convocation of the Alumni, was elected their first representative upon the Board of Trustees of Boston University for the term of five years. Has been reëlected in 1890 and again in 1895. Is now secretary of the Board. In 1898, received the degree of Ph. D., from Boston University. Is president of the New England Deaconess Home and Training School Corporation. April, 1900, was elected a delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church which meets in May. Present address, Wellesley Hills, Mass.

RAWSON, EDWARD. Has been engaged in the pork packing business in Cincinnati, Ohio; October, 1871, became a member of the firm of J. Rawson & Son; in November, 1898, firm name changed to J. Rawson's Sons — still in the same line of business; director and chairman of the chorus committee of the Cincinnati May Musical Festival Association; director and officer in several different corporations and companies. June 5, 1879, was married to Clara Hobart, of New York City. March 28, 1880, Hobart Rawson was born; June 27, 1883, Ethel Rawson was born, and died Oct. 23, 1883; Nov. 2, 1887, Edward Rawson, Jr., was born; Feb. 24, 1890, Henry Lee Rawson was born, and died August 16, 1890; March 9, 1893, Dorothy Rawson was born; August 17, 1899, Marion Rawson was born. Present address: Care J. Rawson's Sons, Cincinnati, Ohio.

RICH, JAMES ROGERS. Failing to receive his degree with the Class he returned from France the same year, 1870, and passed a successful examination, receiving his diploma in 1872 "as of the Class of 1870." Then passed three years in the study of architecture at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, Paris. Practised in Boston architectural decorative work. In 1882 began to study painting by himself. In 1883 finished and signed his first oil painting, which was accepted and exhibited at the Paris Salon of that year. Has also exhibited in Munich and in many home exhibitions, receiving a diploma for "excellence of work" at the International Exhibition at New Orleans. After a terrible illness in 1893 went abroad as far as Egypt, but gladly travelled 6000 miles in order to be with the Class on its twenty-fifth anniversary, when he returned to Boston for dinner. (Since which date he has become a confirmed dyspeptic.) Again in November, 1895, travelling towards the East on a tour around the world, he has been living for the past four years in the most beautiful country in the world, the Vale of Kashmir, where he passes the hot weather; while he passes the cold weather in India always in the practice of his chosen art. Has been engaged for three years past upon a canvas of that loveliest creation of man, the Taj Mahal, at Agra, India. This canvas, the largest one of this subject ever painted in situ, he hopes to finish in time for the Exposition of 1900 at Paris. He has never studied painting or drawing under any instruction whatever.

ROBINSON, FRANK W. After graduation went to St. Louis, Mo., remaining a year. Returning to Boston in September, 1871, entered the house of Jordan, Marsh & Co., remaining with them until October, 1886. On January 1, 1887, he was engaged by John H. Pray Sons & Co., of Boston. At the expiration of three years he went to St. Paul, Minn., with Finch, Van Slyck & Co., remaining four years. On May 1, 1894, he represented Clarence Whitman & Co., of New York, in Chicago. He returned East in 1895, and located in New York City, where he is at present, associated with Pottier & Stymus Co., Lexington Avenue and 41st Street. On August 19, 1874, was married to Ada Byron O'Neal, of Kirkwood, Mo. His children are: Ada Rachel, born Aug. 23, 1875; Frank Walcott, born July 8, 1878, and died Feb. 11, 1880; Helen Marion, born Feb. 1, 1881; Harold Lloyd, born April 23, 1884; Alice Walcott, born May 20, 1886, died October 13, 1897.

ROBINSON, OTIS G. Was for some time in the commission business in St. Louis, Mo.; afterwards was in the dry goods business with Nunes & Brittain, in the same city; for the past seventeen years has been with Jordan, Marsh & Co., Boston, as "foreign buyer," going to Europe twice a year for the house.

RODMAN, ALFRED. Was in business until 1875, when he was obliged, on account of ill health, to go abroad for two years; on his return, began the study of law at the Boston Law School, and graduated from there in June, 1879, receiving the degree of LL. B.; was admitted to the Suffolk bar in 1879, and practised law in Boston until the summer of 1887, when he was elected actuary of the Bay State Trust Company, 222 Boylston Street, Boston, and is still there. He was married to Harriet D. Risley, of Washington, D. C., Oct. 31, 1872; and has one son, named Alfred, born April 18, 1874.

ROTCH, THOMAS M. In the fall of 1870 entered the Harvard Medical School; in the spring of 1872 was appointed assistant to the surgeon for out-patients of the Massachusetts General Hospital; was house physician of the hospital from 1873 to 1874; received the degree of M. D. in June, 1874. Was author of an essay to which was awarded the first prize of the Boylston Medical Society, for 1873; subject, "The Emigration of the White Corpuscle in Inflammation. May, 1873." Went abroad in 1874; and after spending two years in Europe, studying in the hospitals, principally in Berlin, Vienna, and Heidelberg, returned to Boston, and began to practise medicine, Oct. 1, 1876, at 121 Boylston Street. Was appointed physician to the Boston Dispensary, Oct. 1, 1876; visiting physician to the Channing Home for Consumptives, March 23, 1878; lecturer on diseases of children for the current year, in the Medical Department of Harvard University, April 10, 1878; and secretary of the Suffolk District Medical Society, April 27, 1878. Is at present practising medicine at 197 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston. Has received the following appointments: visiting physician to the Boston City Hospital; visiting physician to the Children's Hospital; visiting physician to the Infants' Hospital and West End Nursery; examining censor for the Massachusetts Medical Society; councillor to the Massachusetts Medical Society. Was appointed assistant professor of the diseases of children at Harvard in 1888, and was made a full professor in 1893. He has published a book of 1000 pages on "Diseases of Children." Was married June 4, 1874, to Helen Rotch, of New Bedford, Mass.; and on May 21, 1878, Thomas Morgan Rotch, Jr., was born.

SANGER, JOHN W. From graduation until March 8, 1871, was with the John Hancock Insurance Company, Boston; from that time until Jan. 1, 1875, was with Naylor & Co., dealers in iron, steel, etc., also of Boston; from 1877 to 1879 was in the insurance business in Worcester, Mass., in the offices of J. D. Washburn and A. N. Currier (general agent of the Lancashire Insurance Company of Manchester, Eng.); afterwards returned to Boston, and continued in the insurance business at 95 Water Street. For several years was actively interested in the militia of the State, and was assistant inspector-general on the First Brigade Staff. Was married Oct. 1, 1891, to Victoria Anne Garrette, of Ipswich, Mass. In 1895 went New York to engage in business as general agent in the publication of the "American Brewer," a monthly magazine devoted to the interests of the brewing industry of the United States and foreign countries; also in same capacity for the U. S. Brewers' Academy and Experimental Station connected therewith. Residence, East Orange, N. J. Present address, 200 Worth Street, New York, N. Y.

SARGENT, JOSEPH, JR. During the summer of 1870 travelled through California and Canada; was treasurer of the Crompton Carpet Company of Worcester, Mass., and agent of the Pakachog Mills of the same city; became a member of the firm of O. H. Sampson & Co., of Boston, August 15, 1884. Dec. 5, 1872, was married to Nellie Louise McClure, of New York. Their children are: Joseph Sargent, 3d, born Jan. 13, 1874; Nellie Cushman Sargent, born Feb. 12, 1876; George McClure Sargent, born Jan. 15, 1880; Emily Whitney Sargent, born July 15, 1882. Residence, Boston, Mass. [From last Report. No reply received.]

* SARGENT, LUCIUS MANLIUS, the second son of Horace Binney and Elizabeth Little (Swett) Sargent, was born at Roxbury on July 5, 1848. There, as a child, he lived the life of a country boy, and when he grew old enough, his father used to drive him to town to school, bringing him back in the afternoon. Even when still very young, he began to show that love for animals which strengthened with age, and had become little less than a passion before he died.

In 1861, just as the war broke out, General Sargent took his family to Europe, and placed the boys at a boarding-school in Neuchatel, where they stayed for a couple of years, passing a third at the college, a sort of preliminary to the university. Sargent had a taste for languages, and while in Switzerland learned French as only children can who live among natives. He always spoke it admirably. In 1864 the family returned to Roxbury, and there the boys were fitted for Harvard by Mr. Dillaway and Mr. Collar.

When we entered, in 1866, Sargent took a room in Little's Block, Horton living next door to him, and there we got to know him; and to know him, with most of us, was to love him. Indeed, at eighteen he was the most charming of boys; handsome, gay, full of humor, active, delighting in sports, and at the same time warm-hearted and affectionate. Of course he belonged to all the societies, — the Institute, the Pudding, the Porcellian, and the rest, — and, as he was a born mimic, although he hated to learn parts, he acted in all our theatricals.

On graduating he went to Europe, and passed some time in Paris during the siege, after which he spent a year at the University of Berlin with Frank Pendleton, to whom he remained deeply attached down to the day of his death. In 1872 he came home, read law for a year at Salem with Perry and Endicott, and then studied for two years more at the Law School, taking his degree in 1875. He then began practice immediately. In November, 1876, he married Marian Appleton Coolidge, and in the following October a daughter was born, who proved to be their only child. Sargent continued at the bar about four years, but the profession never suited him, and in November, 1879, when offered the treasurership of the Amory Manufacturing Company, he accepted without hesitation. With this appointment began probably the happiest period of his life. Sargent was naturally cautious and at the same time enterprising, and made a good treasurer; so much so that in 1880 he was promoted to the Lawrence, where he remained until he died, acting also for a part of the time as treasurer of the Amoskeag, while Mr. Coolidge was Minister in France.

This business life suited him perfectly. With occupation enough to interest without harassing him, with an easy income, and ample time for his amusements, he seemed the picture of content. His chief pleasure lay in his horses. He loved to be with them, to ride or drive them, or even sit and look at them, and he often said that his ideal of a happy life would be stock-farming. In truth, he would have made a great breeder; he had a remarkable eye for a horse, he never forgot one he had seen, and he very rarely made a bad purchase. One of his last undertakings was to organize the New Riding Club, of which he was elected president.

In summer he lived in a beautiful cottage at Magnolia, where he sailed when the weather grew too hot for riding; but his season was the autumn, when hunting began, and in the hunting field he met his death. He had been a member of the Myopia Club for many years, and in all his seasons had not been hurt; perhaps long immunity had made him careless; perhaps he trusted too much to the animal he rode, but as often happens to the best horsemen he met disaster where a child would have gone safe.

On the afternoon of Oct. 28, 1893, just as it fell dusk, the hounds were running fast, and amidst a bunch of men he came to a place stopped by a single sapling placed as a rail. Had he been prudent, he would have pulled up to make sure that his horse saw where he was going, for the light had begun to fail; but the height was nothing, and Sargent rode on expecting his hunter to take the jump almost in his stride. Probably the beast did not see the obstacle until too late, for he did not appear to rise, but striking with his whole momentum above the knees, he plunged forward throwing Sargent over his head. As the horse rose he may have struck his rider, but of that there is no proof. Sargent never knew himself, for he was stunned.

On examination, the accident gave Sargent's friends little or no alarm; a severe shaking and a broken rib being apparently the extent of the injury. But a few days later he went to Boston, was exposed to the cold, took a chill, and pneumonia set in. Even then his physician did not apprehend danger, and on the evening of November 14, when he left his house, thought him mending. Suddenly his heart failed, and in half an hour he was dead.

Throughout his life, Sargent always retained that indescribable charm which made us delight in him at Cambridge. Sympathetic, genial, witty, and cordial, he was the most agreeable of comrades, and the most winning of hosts. Socially he held a position apart, no one resembled him, and though he had the freest way of speaking his mind, no one took it amiss. Rather unusually he grew in popularity as he grew in age, for all young people adored him. As a man of business he had already attained a position of influence, and, had he lived, his influence might have become commanding, for he had good sense, good judgment, and discretion, combined with absolute integrity, courage, and honor.

SCUDDER, WINTHROP S. Was for four years with the Walworth Manufacturing Company, of Boston. Since 1874 has been connected with Houghton, Mifflin & Co., publishers, Boston, the Riverside Press, Cambridge. Was married April 11, 1888, to Caroline Townsend, of Albany, N. Y. July 3, 1889, Theodore Townsend was born. His wife died July 10, 1889. Residence, Brookline, Mass.

SEAVEY, OSCAR. Seavey writes: "In reply to your letter of inquiry, I must plead guilty to neglect in reporting myself, and by way of penance I send you the following notes: Immediately after graduation, I came to California and located in Placer County. For the first seven years I taught school and mined during the vacations. In 1877 was elected county superintendent of schools; was reëlected in 1879 and 1882. In 1886 ran for State Senator on the Democratic ticket; did the same in 1888, but, as the Democrats were in the minority, was defeated. From 1887 to 1890 I edited and managed the 'Placer Herald.' In 1890 was again elected county superintendent of schools for four years, but was defeated this fall by the 'Native Sons,' an organization composed of young men born in this State. In 1894 could have had the nomination for superintendent of public Instruction, but owing to the disaffection of many Democrats toward Cleveland and the naturally large Republican majority in the State, I declined. Am now, and have been for fifteen and a half years, a member of the county board of education. Have not written a book, but have contributed considerable matter to the press in the way of prose and poetry. Have published two translations from the German. Have been a correspondent of the 'San Francisco Examiner' for years.

"Was married Sept. 3, 1874, to Miss Annie E. Patterson, whose birthplace was Brooklyn, N. Y. Children were born to us as follows: Alice Mabel, July 16, 1875; Annie Ethel, Feb. 21, 1878; William Cullen, Oct. 14, 1879; Carrie May, Feb. 25, 1881; Oscar F., Jr., Sept. 3, 1883; Harold Granville, Oct. 7, 1885; Marjorie Ruth, Dec. 6, 1886; Marguerite Lydia, Feb. 2, 1890; Ralph Graydon, Dec. 19, 1892; Helen Lucille, Oct. 25, 1894. Marjorie Ruth died April 25, 1890; Harold, May 6, 1892; and Alice Mabel, August 11, 1894.

"At the present time I am not holding any office or position, except that on the board of education. Intend to enter the educational or newspaper field; am uncertain as to the choice. Have had a great deal to do with fraternal societies, and am now Great Sachem of the I. O. R. M. of this State." [From last Report. No reply received.]

SHELDON, CHAUNCEY C. Taught school for about four years; and in October, 1874, entered the Harvard Medical School; in July, 1876, became house officer at the Boston City Hospital, and in January, 1878, at the Boston Lying-in Hospital.

Received the degree of M. D. in June, 1877; is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society; is practising in Lynn, Mass., where he has been city physician; for several years has been superintendent of the Lynn Hospital, as well as a member of the visiting staff; is a member of the Oxford Club. On June 5, 1880, was married to May L. Firth, of Boston; on July 10, 1881, Louisa Sheldon was born, and on Sept. 18, 1884, she died; July 17, 1885, Russell Firth Sheldon was born.

SHEPARD, WALTER. Studied civil engineering for two years at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, receiving the degree of S. B. in February, 1873; since June, 1872, has been in the employ of the Boston and Albany Railroad Company, with the exception of about a year, when he was employed as assistant engineer on the Brookline (Mass.) Water-Works. Was appointed chief engineer of the above named railroad company Oct. 1, 1894. Was married Dec. 15, 1875, to Sarah Elizabeth Austin. Mrs. Shepard died Feb. 10, 1886, leaving one child, Russell Austin Shepard, born Feb. 19, 1885. Russell died May 16, 1897. Was married November 22, 1897, to Mary Adeline Faught. Dorothy Shepard was born September 14, 1898. Residence, 79 Bloomfield Street, Dorchester, Mass.

SHERMAN, BARKER B. Spent 1870–71 in study at Medford and in substitute teaching there and in Boston; 1871–73 sub-master of Hughes High School, Cincinnati, Ohio; 1874–77 student at Andover Theological Seminary, graduating B. D.; 1878–80 acting pastor of Congregational Church, Thetford, Vt.; 1880–83 pastor, ordained, and installed by council, of Congregational Church, Sherbrooke, P. Q., Can.; 1884–89 pastor, by council, of Congregational Church, Wollaston (Quincy, 5th ward), Mass.; 1890–98 pastor, by council, of Congregational Church, Chelsea, Orange County, Vt., and Superintendent of Public Schools; June, 1898–September, 1899, without charge at Medford, Mass.; October, 1899, in business in New York City. Sept. 20, 1881, married Miss Sarah A. Winsor, of Boston, Mass. March 1, 1883, Hope Sherman born.

SMITH, S. SIDNEY. In October, 1870, entered the Columbia College Law School, N. Y.; was graduated May 15, 1872, receiving the degree of LL. B.; June 14, 1872, was admitted as attorney and counsellor at law to practise in all the courts of record of the State of New York; Jan. 1, 1873, became a partner in the law firm of Martin & Smith, New York; July 1, 1877, formed a partnership with his two brothers, Elliot and Howard A., under the firm name of Elliot & S. Sidney Smith; during December, 1877, and January, made a trip to the Bermudas for his health. Was married on June 3, 1873, to Katharine V. Toffey, of Cambridge, Mass. On May 24, 1876, Emily Atkinson Smith was born; died May 27, 1876; on Feb. 15, 1880, Julia Pratt Smith was born. In 1883 travelled for five months in Europe with Walter T. Winsor. May 19, 1884, Mrs. Smith died; July 1, 1886, married his cousin Edith, daughter of the late George J. Cornell. On July 5, 1888, Philip Sidney Smith was born. In 1890 was elected treasurer of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, and aided, as chairman of the building committee, in the planning and construction of the library and club-house, erected in 1895 and 1896, at 43d and 44th streets, New York; in June, 1893, was elected to the Board of Trustees of the Phillips Exeter Academy, the school at which he fitted for college. Clubs: Century, University, Harvard, Down Town Bar Association. Address, 59 Wall Street, New York.

SMITH, W. BUGBEE. Until February, 1872, studied engineering at the Lawrence Scientific School and in the office of Channing Whitaker, M. E., at Lowell, Mass.; Jan. 1, 1873, entered the engineer's office of the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company, at Marshall, Texas; in the following October entered the draughting room of the Southwark Foundry, Philadelphia, where he remained about two years; from October, 1877, till June, 1879, was at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as first assistant in mechanical engineering; from October, 1879, to May, 1881, was in the office of Henry G. Morris, in Philadelphia; in May, 1881, opened an office in Philadelphia as a mechanical engineer and contractor, and continued the business to March, 1897. His business consisted principally of contracting for iron structures; the largest works undertaken being the stand-pipe for the Spring Garden Water-Works, Philadelphia, and the iron work of the buildings of the Franklin Sugar Refinery and the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, Philadelphia, and the Academic Building at West Point, N. Y. He is now the engineer of the firm of W. W. & R. S. Stevens, structural and architectural iron workers, Philadelphia. On June 20, 1874, was married, at Buffalo, N. Y., to Helen Elizabeth Morey. On Jan. 19, 1876, Margaret White Smith; on August 19, 1877, Lucy Augusta Smith; and on July 7, 1885, Walter Winthrop Smith were born. Margaret White Smith died June 4, 1887.

SOLEY, JAMES R. Tutor in St. Mark's School, Southborough, Mass., from September, 1870, to July, 1871; Oct. 1, 1871, assistant professor in the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., and on Sept. 13, 1873, professor and head of the Department of English Studies, History, and Law. August 18, 1876, appointed professor in the navy, with the rank of lieutenant; October, 1876, published "History of the Naval Academy." April to December, 1878, on special duty in Europe, in connection with the Department of Education at the Paris Exposition, and also in the inspection of foreign naval colleges; June, 1880, published report on "Foreign Systems of Naval Education." June, 1882, promoted to relative rank of Commander United States Navy, and assigned to special duty at the Navy Department, Washington, D. C. March, 1883, published "The Blockade and the Cruisers," in Scribner's War Series; December, 1883, Superintendent of Naval War Record Office, Navy Department, in charge of the publication of the naval records of the civil war; March, 1885, published, with Commodore Schley, "The Rescue of Greely." November, 1885, delivered a course of eight lectures on American naval history, at the Lowell Institute, Boston; November, 1887, published "The Sailor Boys of 1812;" January, 1888, delivered a second course of eight lectures at the Lowell Institute, on "European Neutrality during the Civil War;' 1888, published "The Sailor Boys of '61;" 1892, published "The Maritime Industries of America;" published "The Wars of the United States," in the "Narrative and Critical History of America;" and has contributed various articles to "Scribner's Magazine," the "Century Magazine," "The North American Review," and "The Nation." From 1885 to 1888, in addition to duties at the Navy Department, was lecturer on international law at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I. While at Annapolis, 1873–76, studied law in the office of Hon. A. B. Hagner; 1890 graduated with degree of LL. B. at Law School of Columbian University, and was admitted to the bar of the District of Columbia; 1893 admitted to the New York bar. July, 1890, resigned commission in the navy and appointed Assistant Secretary of the Navy, which office he held until his resignation at the close of the Harrison administration, in March, 1893. In 1890 delivered oration at the unveiling of the monument to commemorate the Jeannette Expedition; 1891, at the request of the city of Boston, delivered eulogy on Admiral Porter. Since May, 1893, engaged in the practice of law, as a member of the firm of Tracy, Boardman & Platt, Mills Building, 35 Wall Street, New York. Was one of the four counsel of Venezuela before the International Tribunal of Arbitration on the boundary of Venezuela and British Guiana, at Paris, May to October, 1899, making both written and oral arguments before the tribunal. Is a member of the Harvard Club of New York, Union Club, University Club, Metropolitan Club of Washington, Alibi Club of Washington, Shinnecock Golf Club, Bar Association of the City of New York, U. S. Naval Institute, American Historical Association, and American Social Science Association. Dec. 1, 1875, was married to Mary Woolsey Howland. March 9, 1877, Una Felice Soley was born; Dec. 7, 1880, Robert Shaw Howland Soley was born; died Nov. 25, 1881; March 15, 1883, Mary Woolsey Soley was born.

SOULE, RICHARD H. Studied mechanical engineering for two years at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, completing the course on June 1, 1872, and receiving, on March 1, 1873, the degree of S. B. M. E.; was engaged in civil engineering, in connection with the Boston Water-Works, in the fall of 1872, and in the following January became connected with the Southwark Foundry, Philadelphia, where he was assistant superintendent; in September, 1875, entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in the office of its mechanical engineer, Altoona, Penn., and in November, 1877, was transferred to the department of tests and experiments at the Altoona shops. May 1, 1879, was appointed superintendent of motive power for the following railroads of the Pennsylvania system: Northern Central Railway, Baltimore and Potomac Railroad, and Alexandria and Fredericksburg Railroad; headquarters at Baltimore, Md. Oct. 15, 1881, superintendent of motive power, Philadelphia and Erie Division, Pennsylvania Railroad; office at Williamsport, Penn. June 1, 1882, superintendent of motive power, Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railroad; office at Columbus, Ohio. June 1, 1883, superintendent of motive power, New York, West Shore and Buffalo Railway; office at Frankfort, N. Y. Dec. 15, 1885, superintendent of motive power, New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad; office at Buffalo, N. Y. Feb. 15, 1887, general manager New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad; office at New York City. April 30, 1888, resigned, and spent the next six months abroad. October, 1888, located at Pittsburg, Penn., in connection with the Westinghouse interests. June, 1891, to July 1, 1897, superintendent of motive power, Norfolk and Western Railroad, Roanoke, Va.; August, 1897, to December, 1899, with the Baldwin Locomotive Works of Philadelphia, during the first year travelling in their interest in South Africa and Russia; subsequently representing them at Chicago, Ill. Since Dec. 1, 1899, has been engaged in consulting mechanical engineering work, and is now permanently located at 71 Broadway, New York. April 13, 1882, married Ida Helen Whittemore, Brookline, Mass. Has two sons, Winsor and Augustus Whittemore, aged (June, 1900) about 15 and 16 respectively. Is a member of the following clubs: the Chicago Club, the Technical Club of Chicago, the Western Railway Club of Chicago, the Harvard Club of Chicago, the Northwestern Association of Alumni of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Society of Mining Engineers, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Master Mechanics' Association, the Master Car Builders' Association.

SPACKMAN, WILLIAM M. For six months after graduation, studied in the Episcopal Divinity School at Philadelphia; on Jan. 1, 1871, became private secretary to Mr. J. Edgar Thomson, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Philadelphia, which position he filled until the death of Mr. Thomson, in May, 1874; was one of the trustees of the estate. Studied law for two years in the University of Philadelphia, and was admitted to the bar, but does not practise. In 1881 removed with his family to New York, to assume a position as treasurer of the Mexican

National and other railroad corporations. Has since been occupied in business in New York chiefly in the charge of several estates. Is a member of the Harvard and Century Clubs of New York. Address, No. 820 Madison Avenue, New York. Married, Nov. 18, 1875, Margaret Livingston Swift, and has one child, Emily Swift Spackman, born Feb. 20, 1878.

*SPALDING, CHARLES PARKER. Was born in Lowell, Mass., Sept. 24, 1848. Was educated and prepared for College in the grammar and high schools of Lowell, entering with the Class in 1866. Was a member of the Π H, Φ B K, Natural History Society, and Pierian Sodality. Also belonged to the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston. After graduation, studied at Lowell, Mass., until October, 1872, when he went abroad, and entered the University of Berlin, attending lectures in the medical department; also studied in Heidelberg and Vienna; returned in March, 1874, and in the following November entered the Harvard Medical School; received the degree of M. D. in 1877. During the following summer he travelled in California and Colorado, and on his return opened an office in Lowell, where he practised until 1881, when he went abroad, studying the eye and throat in Paris and Vienna, returning to his practice in 1882. He was for many years and until his death secretary of St. John's Hospital, was a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, a member and treasurer of the North Middlesex Medical Society, a member of Kilwining Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and of Mount Horeb Chapter. Was married Sept. 24, 1883, to Miss Caroline G. Livingston, and had six children: William Livingston, born May 28, 1884; Mary, Feb. 16, 1886; Caroline, April 16, 1888; Sidney Parker, August 5, 1889; Helen, May 13, 1891; Charles Parker, Oct. 22, 1894. Spalding died at Lowell, March 25, 1895.

SPAULDING, HENRY K. Studied law in a Boston office until December, 1870, when he took charge of the Concord (Mass.) High School, where he remained until June, 1872; in September he entered the Columbia Law School, New York; was graduated, with the degree of LL. B., May, 1875; was admitted to the bar May 17, 1875, and practised in the office of J. H. & B. F. Watson, New York, until August, 1876, when he went to San Francisco; was admitted to the bar of State of California and practised there for three years with Judge Thompson, then with Col. C. E. Royce, and afterwards in the office of Stephen H. Phillips, Esq.; he returned to New York in 1880. For ten years (1886–1896) he was an assistant teacher in the school for boys established and conducted by Arthur H. Cutler ('70). In 1896 he became and is still a member of the examining board of the Municipal Civil Service Commission of New York City, on which board F. G. Ireland ('68) is chief examiner. He was married to Eunice A. Ladd, of Lowell, Mass., Dec. 27, 1883.

STONE, RICHARD H. Studied in the Law School of the Cincinnati College until April 18, 1872, when he was graduated, receiving the degree of LL. B.; practised law in Cincinnati for some years; was then obliged, on account of trouble with his eyes, to give up the practice of his profession; and, his physician advising some out-of-door employment, took up railroad engineering, in which he has been engaged in the West for the past six or seven years. [From last Report. No reply received.]

*SWAIM, ROGER W. Was born in Worcester, Mass., July 12, 1848. His parents were Samuel B. and Aurora D. (Skinner) Swaim. He was fitted for College at the Cambridge High School, and entered with the Class in 1866; after graduation, in order to restore his health, which was quite poor, he started, in July, 1870, for a tour abroad, and for fifteen months travelled in Europe, Egypt, and the Holy Land, arriving in Berlin in September, 1871, where, as a member of the University, he studied during the winter. In March, 1872, while in Italy, he was taken sick, and died in Florence, on April 1, of congestion of the brain, aged twenty-three years and nine months. He had selected the ministry as his profession.

SWAN, CHARLES H. Practises law in Boston; married Caroline Metcalf Nazro, of Dorchester, Nov. 6, 1884; Lucy Cushing Swan was born March 5, 1886. Gardner Swan was born Nov. 29, 1887. Swan is a member of the University Club. Residence, Dorchester, Mass. Address, 82 Devonshire Street, Boston.

TAFT, STEPHEN S. In August, 1870, commenced reading law with Staples & Goulding, Worcester, Mass.; Oct. 9 with Jewell, Gaston & Field, Boston; Oct. 7, 1871, entered the Harvard Law School; admitted to the bar April 23, 1872; May 1 formed a copartnership with James G. Allen in the practice of law at Palmer, Mass.; partnership dissolved July 1; now practising alone at Springfield. Was a member of the State Legislature in 1886 and 1887. On Oct. 23, 1873, was married to Mary Eliot Holbrook, of Watertown, Mass.; and on July 24, 1874, Mabel Eliot Taft was born; Lucy Bennett Taft, Sept. 5, 1875, and Stephen S. Taft, Jr., Sept. 2, 1876 (graduated, 1898). He removed to Springfield Nov. 5, 1891, and now has an office at 285 Main St.

* THAYER, STEPHEN V. R. Was born August 2, 1847, in Boston; his parents were Nathaniel and Cornelia Patterson (Van Rensselaer) Thayer. He was prepared for College by Mr. George W. Pierce, and entered with the Class in 1886; from graduation until his death was connected with the firm of J. E. Thayer & Brother, of Boston. On Nov. 2, 1870, was married to Alice Robeson, of Boston. On July 15, 1871, Stephen Van Rensselaer Thayer, Jr., was born, being the first child born to a member of the Class. Thayer died in Boston, Oct. 10, 1871, of consumption, after a short illness, aged twenty-four years and two months. The Class Cradle was presented to Mrs. S. V. R. Thayer, Oct. 8, 1872. It consisted of an ornamental silver preserve dish, in the shape of a cradle, bearing the inscription, —

STEPHEN VAN RENSSELAER THAYER, JUN.,
FROM THE CLASS OF 1870.
JULY 15, 1871.

TICKNOR, THOMAS B. Since graduation has been in the publishing business; for the past eleven years with Houghton, Mifflin & Co., of Boston. Office at the Riverside Press, Cambridge. From Nov., 1874, to Feb. 6, 1899, was connected with the First Corps Cadets, M. V. M., and is now on the retired list with rank of major. Is a member of the University Club, Boston, the Footlight Club, Jamaica Plain, of which he was president for twenty years, the Colonial Club, Cambridge, the Cambridge Social Dramatic Club, the Episcopalian Club of Boston, and the Veteran Association of the First Corps Cadets. Was married Jan. 10, 1894, to Florence Elizabeth Harris, of Boston. Residence, 18 Highland Street, Cambridge.

TUCKERMAN, ALFRED. Was in Europe from July, 1870, till September, 1874, chiefly at Berlin, passing most of the time in study; received the degree of Ph. D. et A. M. from Leipsic, Germany, in 1874; in November, 1877, became a regular assistant in the Astor Library, New York, having been a volunteer assistant for a year before. On December 10, 1879, was married to Clara L. Fargis, of New York. He resigned his position in the Astor Library in 1880, after having served there four years, with four promotions. After that he turned his attention to the compilation of indexes to scientific literature, which has been his occupation ever since. These indexes have all been published in the "Miscellaneous Collections" of the Smithsonian Institution, and are on the following subjects: To the "Literature of the Spectroscope," in 1888; to that of "Thermodynamics," in 1890; and to that of the "Chemical Influence of Light," in 1891. Has also prepared a "Catalogue of Mineral Waters," and has just completed for the Smithsonian Institution the second volume of his "Index to the Literature of the Spectroscope." In 1890 he was made a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and in the following year he was made a Fellow of the same, with a position on the Committee for Indexing Chemical Literature. In 1893 he became a member of the New York Academy of Sciences. While a resident of Newport, R. I., from 1888 to 1893, he was a director of the Redwood Library. Residence, 342 West 57th Street, New York.

VAUGHAN, WILLIAM WARREN. Passed the year of 1870–71 abroad, one half of it at the University of Heidelberg. Took the regular course of two years in the Harvard Law School, receiving the degree of LL. B.; also received the degree of A. M. from the Academic Council of Harvard, upon examination on law subjects after an additional course at the Law School, June, 1874; and was admitted to the bar November, 1874. Has continued in the practice of the law, with special attention to trusts and wills. Has contributed various articles to "Harvard Magazine," "The Nation," etc. Office, Rooms 1001 to 1003 Exchange Building, 53 State Street, Boston. On Oct. 16, 1882, was married to Ellen Twisleton Parkman, daughter of the late Dr. Samuel Parkman, of Boston. Has two children: Mary Eliot Vaughan, born March 1, 1884, and Samuel Vaughan, born April 15, 1887. Residence, 354 Beacon Street, Boston.

VIAUX, FREDERIC H. Founded the Real Estate Exchange of Boston in 1888–89, and has been its treasurer and executive officer since its organization. On June 18, 1873, was married to Florence Ballou Farrar, of Boston. On June 8, 1874, Victor Viaux, and on July 16, 1875, Theodore Viaux were born; Theodore died May 1, 1876. Florence Viaux was born June 16, 1878; and Frederic Viaux on August 10, 1882. Address, Room 613, 53 State Street, Boston.

WADSWORTH, WILLIAM AUSTIN. After graduation entered the University at Berlin; returned to this country in the spring of 1872, and is living at Geneseo, N. Y. He has taken an active interest in local and state affairs, and has served on numerous boards and commissions; is a member of the American Geographical Society, American Zoölogical Society, Century Association, and numerous clubs in New York and Boston. During the war with Spain was major and quartermaster, U. S. Volunteers, on General Merritt's staff. The following extract from a letter to the Secretary refers to his service in the army: —

"I cannot think of anything in my army life that would interest the members of the Class. It was very hard work and very important work, but I got through successfully, and we had no trouble. I was on General Merritt's staff, and had charge of selecting and equipping the transports which took the army across the Pacific. We took these men from a cold climate into the tropics on a thirty days' voyage without overcrowding, and landed them without loss. At Cavite I had charge of unloading the vessels and forwarding the supplies to the front. It was no picnic on account of bad weather and the utter lack of facilities, but the troops did not need for any essentials of food, clothes, ammunition, hospital supplies, etc.

"After the capture of Manila, I stayed with General Merritt at headquarters till he left, and then with General Otis, until the settling down to monotonous garrison work."

WAIT, LUCIEN A. Has been connected with Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., since graduation; was assistant professor of mathematics until June, 1877, when he was promoted to be associate professor; in 1891 he was promoted to a full professorship of mathematics; is president of the Board of Trustees, and treasurer of Cascadilla School, the leading preparatory school for Cornell University. Was abroad one year as United States Consul at Piraeus and Athens, Greece. Spent the summer of 1882 studying mathematics at Cambridge, England. On August 12, 1873, was married to Anna J. Dolloff, of Exeter, N. H. On July 5, 1874, at Athens, Greece, Olga Athene Wait was born; on Feb. 27, 1876, Alice Wait was born; and on Dec. 23, 1888, Zeta Wait was born, who died on October 27, 1889. His younger daughter, Alice, was married on May 3, 1898, to William Stanton Brayton, of Providence, R. I. Wait is a member of the American Mathematical Society, and at the December meeting was elected a member of the Council (the governing board) for three years.

WALCOTT, CHARLES H. Studied law until June, 1872, when he was admitted to the bar, in Boston. Practises at No. 23 Court Street; was joint author (with Henry F. Buswell, of the Class of '66) of a law book treating of "Pleadings and Practice in Civil Actions in the Courts of Massachusetts," published in the year 1875; a second and revised edition being published in 1883, and a third edition in 1894. Also wrote and published, in the year 1884, a volume of local history entitled "Concord in the Colonial Period," and early in 1899 an illustrated monograph entitled "Sir Archibald Campbell, of Inverneill, sometime Prisoner of War in the Jail at Concord, Mass." On August 27, 1886, was appointed a member of the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation, and has been chairman of the Board since August, 1889. On September 22, 1875, was married to Florence Keyes, of Concord. Roger was born September 7, 1876, and died January 17, 1879. Philip Keyes (H. U., '97) was born December 11, 1877, and after two years at the Harvard Law School is now completing his law studies in New York City. Mrs. Walcott died Dec. 23, 1877. On July 21, 1891, was married to Jessie McDermott, of Washington, D. C. Margaret was born July 21, 1892, and died two days afterwards. John was born July 4, 1893. Residence, Concord, Mass.

WATSON, BENJAMIN M. Was for some time engaged in horticulture at Plymouth, Mass.; for a number of years has been instructor in horticulture at the Bussey Institution at Jamaica Plain, and has been Professor Goodale's assistant in the summer classes in botany at Cambridge.

WELLS, HENRY. Entered the dry goods house of his father in 1870, and in the following year was made junior partner of the firm of J. C. Wells & Son, of Rising Sun, Ind., with branches at Patriot and Vevay, Ind. Upon the death of his father, in 1872, he succeeded to the business. In 1874 removed to Arcola, Ill.; and in 1875 to Cairo, Ill. In 1873 and 1874 he assisted in organizing national banks at Rising Sun and Arcola. Having decided to follow the business of banking, he sold out his dry goods business in 1875, and assisted in forming the Alexander County Bank of Cairo, Ill., becoming its vice-president in March and its cashier in July, 1875; also started the real estate and insurance office of Wells & Kerth. In July, 1887, the Alexander County National Bank and the Alexander County Savings Bank were formed, with Wells as cashier of both institutions. In 1891 removed to Chicago to engage in the lumber business. In 1895 removed to Reading, Mass., entering the employ of the First National Bank of that place as assistant cashier. In 1897 was appointed cashier of same institution, which position he now holds. On May 22, 1872, was married to Emma C. Morse, of Rising Sun, Ind. On Feb. 25, 1873, James Claude Wells, and on Dec. 25, 1878, Henry Morse Wells, were born.

WESTON, MELVILLE M. Until September, 1871, was in the law office of R. D. Smith, of Boston, when he entered the Harvard Law School, receiving the degree of LL. B. in June, 1872; travelled abroad from July, 1872, to October, 1873; was admitted to the bar in December, 1873, and has since continued in the practice of the law in Boston.

WHARTON, WILLIAM F. After graduation studied law at the Harvard Law School, and received the degree of LL. B. in 1873. Was admitted to the bar the same year. Travelled in Europe for a couple of years, returning to Boston, Mass., in the autumn of 1875, where he entered immediately into the practice of the law. In 1881 he edited the seventh edition of Story on Partnership. Was a member of the Common Council of the city of Boston for five years, from 1880 to 1884 inclusive, and a member of the House of Representatives of the General Court of Massachusetts, representing a portion of the city of Boston for four years, 1885 to 1888 inclusive, holding the position of chairman of the judiciary committee in 1888. He declined a reëlection in 1889. Was appointed Assistant Secretary of State of the United States by President Harrison in April, 1889, which position he resigned, March 4, 1893. In May of that year he returned to Boston, and resumed the practice of the law in that city. He now lives in Groton, Mass., having his law office in Boston at No. 50 State Street. Was married Oct. 31, 1877, to Fanny Pickman, of Beverly, Mass., who died Oct. 6, 1880. Was again married, Feb. 10, 1891, to Susan C. Lay, of Washington, D. C. Has two sons and one daughter: William P. Wharton, born August 12, 1880; Philip Wharton, born August 13, 1892; and Constance Wharton, born May 7, 1894.

WHITE, JOHN STUART. Appointed sub-master in the Boston Latin School in July, 1870; elected master in December, 1870; taught three years, and in 1873 was voted a year's leave of absence by the Latin School Committee (from July, 1873), to be spent in Europe in travel and the study of schools and methods; on returning from Europe in 1874, accepted the headmastership of the Brooks School, Cleveland, Ohio; starting with sixteen boys, began the second year with 150; remained in Cleveland six years — 1874 to 1880; received the degree of LL. D. from Trinity College, June, 1879; removed to New York in 1880, to establish a private institution, the Berkeley School, preparatory for the leading universities; the school now has 200 boys, and 24 masters and assistants; occupies a new fire-proof school building, covering five lots of land, with an armory, gymnasium, and swimming-pool, and has ten acres of playgrounds in the suburbs, known as the "Berkeley Oval." Author of "The Boys' and Girls' Plutarch," 1885; "Herodotus," 1886; "Pliny," 1887 (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York). Frequent contributor to various magazines and periodicals. Married, in Boston, Feb. 28, 1871, to Georgie A. Read, of Boston. Children: Eliot White, born in Boston, Feb. 20, 1872, — graduated from Harvard, magna cum laude, in Class of '92; graduated from the Episcopal Theological School, at Cambridge, 1895; ordained in New York, June, 1895; two years assistant rector of Grace Church, New York; now (for two years) rector of St. John's Church, Worcester, Mass.; Grace Rogers White, born in Dresden, Germany, March 20, 1874, — entered Vassar College, 1891; Ernest Devereux White, born in Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 12, 1876, — entered Harvard University, 1894, now master in Berkeley School; Gilbert Newman White, born in New York City, Sept. 18, 1887. Address 435 Madison Ave., New York.

WILBY, CHARLES B. From Sept., 1870, until June, 1871, was engaged as assistant in Mr. Bliss's Classical School in Cincinnati; in October, 1870, entered the Cincinnati Law School; received the degree of LL. B. April 17, 1872, and April 18 was admitted to the bar. In September, 1872, opened an office in Cincinnati; in 1876 formed a partnership with Gustavus H. Wald (Harvard Law School, '75), and is still practising law with him in Cincinnati, under the firm name of Wilby & Wald. On June 3, 1879, was married to Harriet Elizabeth Mitchell, of Cincinnati. Has four children, two sons and two daughters. Mitchell Wilby, born April 13, 1880, now a freshman at Cambridge; Martha Coffin Wilby, born June 22, 1881; Mary Hinman Wilby born Nov. 27, 1882, and Joseph Clark Wilby, born July 8, 1887. Address, 514 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

WILLIS, GRINNELL. In October, 1870, entered the commission house of Almy & Co., of New York; on Jan. 1, 1873, the firm was dissolved, and became Lewis Brothers & Co., with whom he remained until August, 1875, when he moved to Philadelphia, joining the branch of the same firm in that city; in the spring of 1879 he returned to the New York office, taking charge of the account of the Wamsutta Mills; travelled abroad in the summer of 1872. On Oct. 24, 1874, was married to Mary Baker Haydock, of New York. On Dec. 31, 1875, Hannah Haydock Willis; on August 28, 1877, Cornelia Grinnell Willis; and on July 24, 1879, Joseph Grinnell Willis, were born. Residence, Morristown, N. J. Business address, Grinnell Willis & Co., 44–46 Leonard Street, New York.

WINSOR, WALTER T. After graduation entered the commission business with Alfred Winsor & Son, Boston; on Nov. 1, 1871, was admitted to the firm. Residence, Brookline, Mass.

WOLCOTT, ROGER. After graduation studied law in the office of T. K. Lothrop, Pemberton Square, and at the Harvard Law School, receiving the degree of LL. B. in 1874; is practising in Boston; travelled abroad in the summer of 1871 and spring of 1875. Was a member of the Common Council of the city of Boston in 1877, 1878, and 1879, and of the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1882, 1883, and 1884. Was the first president of the Republican Club of Massachusetts. Is a member of the Massachusetts Historical Society. Served for two terms as Overseer of Harvard. Received the honorary degree of LL. D. from Williams College. Was elected Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts in 1893, 1894, 1895, and 1896. During ten months of the latter year, owing to the death of Governor Greenhalge, was Acting-Governor. Was elected Governor of Massachusetts in 1897, 1898, 1899. On Sept. 2, 1874, was married to Edith Prescott, of Boston. Huntington Frothingham Wolcott was born Nov. 29, 1875, and died Feb. 19, 1877; on July 25, 1877, Roger Wolcott, Jr.; on May 1, 1880, W. Prescott Wolcott; on Nov. 9, 1881, Samuel Huntington Wolcott; on Feb. 3, 1885, Cornelia Frothingham Wolcott; and on April 7, 1891, Oliver Wolcott, were born. Address, Room 945, 53 State Street, Boston.

WOODARD, CHARLES F. Studied law until October, 1872, receiving the degree of LL. B. from the Harvard Law School in June, 1872; in October was admitted to the bar of Maine, practising in Bangor, where he resides. Oct. 8, 1872, was married to Carrie Varney, of Bangor; on May 19, 1874, Charles Woodard was born, and died May 7, 1876; John V. Woodard was born July 28, 1885.

WORCESTER, FRANCIS J. Was engaged in teaching at various places until 1875; in May, 1875, graduated at Columbia College Law School, and was admitted to the bar in the city of New York, where he practised law until 1898, when he was elected a justice of the Municipal Court of the City of New York. He married Emma A. Hoe, of New York City, Dec. 7, 1880; and has one child, Lucy Hoe Worcester, born Jan. 23, 1883. Address, 462 West 44th Street, New York.

WYATT, J. B. NOEL. Studied architecture in Boston and Paris, and is now practising his profession in Baltimore, Md.; was a member of the firm of Wyatt & Sperry. For last six years a member of the firm of Wyatt & Nolting. Was president of the Harvard Club of Maryland and of the Architectural Club of Baltimore; was instrumental in establishing a course of lectures at the Johns Hopkins University, to be delivered next season by distinguished men in the profession, and open to the public. Is secretary of the Baltimore City Art Commission, one of the directors of the Municipal Art Society, and a member of the Maryland State Board of Health. The new court-house, designed by Wyatt & Nolting, is completed, and has just been opened to the public. It is undoubtedly the largest, most expensive, and most architectural public building in the State of Maryland, has received a good deal of high commendation, more than local, and is considered by some as one of the finest municipal buildings of the country. Has contributed lately one or two articles in some of the leading architectural magazines. Address, 4 East Lexington Street, Baltimore.

ADDRESSES.

[Corrections in cases of error are solicited.]

Adams, Brooks, 23 Court Street, Boston.
Adams, Walter, Framingham, Mass.
Alexander, William P., 346 Broadway, New York.
Ames, Angier, (?) 1812 16th Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.
Buckminster, William B., Rooms 73, 74, and 75, 70 Kilby Street, Boston.
Bunton, George W., 63 Washington Avenue, North Cambridge, Mass.
Burnham, Arthur, Room 701, 60 State Street, Boston.
Chamberlin, William W.
Chapin, Frederic W., M. D., Springfield, Mass.
Chapman, Nelson C., care Eau Claire Lumber Co., St. Louis, Mo.
Clapp, Henry L., 14 Rockville Park, Roxbury, Mass.
Coes, Zorester B., 110 Harvey Street, Germantown, Pa.
Cole, John H., 35 Wall Street, New York.
Curtis, Laurence, 15 Congress Street, Boston.
Curtis, Louis, care Brown Bros. & Co., 50 State Street, Boston.
Curtis, Rest F., 25 Kinross Road, Aberdeen, Boston.
Cushing, Louis T., Cohasset, Mass.
Cutler, Arthur H., 20 East 50th Street, New York.
Deane, Walter, Brewster Street, Cambridge, Mass.
Dixon, A. J. Dallas, 709 Pine Street, Philadelphia, Penn.
Dixwell, John, M. D., 52 West Cedar Street, Boston.
Dodge, William W., 72 Sparks Street, Cambridge.
Drew, Charles A., Equitable Building, Boston.
Dudley, Edward, 35 North Second Street, Camden, N. J.
Dwight, John F., Weymouth, Mass.
Emott, Charles C., The John J. Crooke Co., 186 Grand Street, New York City.
Fernald, B. Marvin, 28 State Street, Boston.
Fisher, George Harrison, 308 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Penn.
Fitz, Andrew, 256½ Essex Street, Salem, Mass.
Francis, Laurens N., Rooms 6 and 7, Crocker Building, Taunton, Mass.
Frothingham, Theodore, 142 South 4th Street, Philadelphia, Penn.
Fuller, Frederick T., Weston, Mass.
Galloway, James B., 115 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill.
Gannett, Thomas B., Channing Place, Cambridge.
Greener, Richard T., 29 West 99th Street, New York City.
Groesbeck, Herman J., M. D., Cincinnati, Ohio.
Hale, William G., University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.
Hill, John E., 28 Chestnut Street, Stoneham, Mass.
Hoar, Charles E., Simi, Ventura Co., Cal.

Holmes, Artemas H., 66 Broadway, New York City.
Holway, Rev. Raymond F., 35 High Street, Charlestown.
Hosea, William G., Wiggins Block, 5th and Vine Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Huntington, Arthur L., 256½ Essex Street, Salem, Mass.
Huntress, Leonard, M. D., Lowell, Mass.
Jordan, James C., (?) Chronicle Building, San Francisco, Cal.
Kettell, Charles W., 19 Brewster Street, Cambridge, Mass.
Kidder, Frederic, Wilmington, N. C.
Ladd, Babson S., 10 Tremont Street, Boston.
Lawrence, Amory A., Lawrence & Co., 68 Chauncy Street, Boston.
Lincoln, Waldo, Worcester, Mass.
Littlefield, George S., 27 State Street, Boston.
Lunt, Horace G., Colorado Springs, Colo.
McMichael, Charles B., 2110 Pine Street, Philadelphia, Penn.
Mann, Benjamin P., 1918 Sunderland Place, Washington, D. C.
Monroe, Charles, 416 Douglas Building, Los Angeles, Cal.
Morison, Ernest N., E. N. Morison & Co., South and German Streets, Baltimore, Md.
Morse, Godfrey, 53 State Street, Boston.
Norcross, Otis, 35 Congress Street, Boston.
Nourse, Franklin, Lawrence Manufacturing Co., Lowell, Mass.
Nye, Charles F., Champlain, N. Y.
Parkman, Henry, 36 Temple Place, Boston.
Parrish, Samuel L., 44 and 46 Broadway, New York.
Parsons, Theophilus, 53 State Street, Boston.
Pearson, George, Pittsburg, Penn.
Peele, Willard S., Hotel Vendome, Boston.
Pendleton, Frank K., 7 East 86th Street, New York.
Perrin, Rev. Willard T., Wellesley Hills, Mass.
Rawson, Edward J., care J. Rawson's Sons, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Rich, J. Rogers, care Hon. William F. Wharton, 50 State Street, Boston.
Robinson, Frank W., care Pottier & Stymus Co., Lexington Ave. and 41st Street, New York.
Robinson, Otis G., care Jordan, Marsh & Co., Boston.
Rodman, Alfred, 222 Boylston Street, Boston.
Rotch, Thomas M., M. D., 197 Commonwealth Ave., Boston.
Sanger, John W., 200 Worth Street, New York.
Sargent, Joseph, Jr., 67 Chauncy Street, Boston.
Scudder, Winthrop S., care Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.
Seavey, Oscar, Auburn, Placer Co., Cal.
Sheldon, Chauncey C., M. D., 49 North Common Street, Lynn, Mass.
Shepard, Walter, 79 Bloomfield Street, Dorchester, Mass.
Sherman, Rev. Barker B., Medford, Mass.
Smith, S. Sidney, 59 Wall Street, New York City.
Smith, W. Bugbee, 1621 Mt. Vernon Street, Philadelphia.
Soley, James R., Tracy, Boardman & Platt, 35 Wall Street, New York.
Soule, Richard H., 71 Broadway, New York.
Spackman, William M., 820 Madison Ave., New York.

Spaulding, Henry K., 102 West 93d Street, New York City.
Stone, Richard H., 381 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Swan, Charles H., 82 Devonshire Street, Boston.
Taft, Stephen S., 285 Main Street, Springfield, Mass.
Ticknor, Thomas B., Riverside Press, Cambridge, Mass.
Tuckerman, Alfred, 342 West 57th Street, New York City.
Vaughan, William W., Rooms 1001–1003, 53 State Street, Boston.
Viaux, Frederic H., Room 613, 53 State Street, Boston.
Wadsworth, William Austin, Geneseo, Livingston County, N. Y.
Wait, Lucien A., Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.
Walcott, Charles H., 23 Court Street, Boston.
Watson, Benjamin M., Jr., Bussey Institution, Jamaica Plain, Mass.
Wells, Henry, 1st National Bank, Reading, Mass.
Weston, Melville M., Room 715, 53 State Street, Boston.
Wharton, William F., 50 State Street, Boston.
White, John S., 20 West 44th Street, New York.
Wilby, Charles B., 514 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Willis, Grinnell, 44–46 Leonard Street, New York.
Winsor, Walter T., care Alfred Winsor & Son, Boston.
Wolcott, Roger, Room 945, 53 State Street, Boston.
Woodard, Charles F., Bangor, Me.
Worcester, Francis J., 462 West 44th Street, New York.
Wyatt, J. B. Noel, 4 East Lexington Street, Baltimore, Md.

MARRIAGES.

Adams, B.	Evelyn Favis	—— Sept. 7, 1889.
*Adams, G. H.	E. Augusta Holmes	New York, April 26, 1877.
Adams, W.	Constance Winchester	West River, Md., May 25, 1885.
Alexander	Elizabeth F. D. Stebbins	Boston, Jan. 3, 1877.
Buckminster	Christine Isabella Chase	Leominster, Mass., Sept. 14, 1870.
Bunton	Ellena S. Brown	Boston, Dec. 18, 1877.
Burnham	Catherine Davenport Bray	Boston, Sept. 30, 1875.
Chamberlin	Elizabeth Ferguson Paine	Worcester, Mass., June 12, 1872.
Chapin	Caroline Minna Cole	Cambridge, June 18, 1878.
Chapman	Mary Bridge	St. Louis, Oct. 21, 1879.
Clapp	Florence S. Greeley	South Boston, July 9, 1874.
Coes	Alice Miller	Cranston, R. I., Feb. 22, 1882.
Cole	*Lucy May Smith	New York, Sept. 26, 1877.
Cole	Josephine McIlvaine Hewson	Oxford, Eng., June 11, 1885.
Curtis, Louis	Fanny Leland Richardson	Boston, Oct., 1890.
Cushing	Mary Rebecca Johnson	Cohasset, Mass., Feb. 14, 1871.
Cutler	Elizabeth Jones Wilson	Aug. 2, 1890.
Deane	Margaret C. Coolidge	Southborough, Mass., Dec. 31, 1878.
*Dexter	Marie Lovell	New York, Aug. 10, 1892.
Dixon	Margaretta Sergeant	Harrisburg, Penn., Nov. 27, 1878.
Dixwell	—— Gurney	Boston, Oct. 6, 1875.
Drew	Hattie W. Clark	Chelsea, Mass., Aug. 3, 1875.
Dudley	*Mary Shaw Bird	Ardmore, Penn., May 21, 1878.
Dudley	*Mary Thurber Brooks	Providence, Nov. 15, 1881.
Dudley	Marie Gordon Mulock	New York, Mar. 4, 1890.
Dwight	Helen Louise Woodruff	Rahway, N. J., Dec. 18, 1873.
Emott	Leila C. Tuckerman	Cambridge, Mass., May 22, 1873.
Fernald	Grace Fuller	Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 25, 1874.
Fisher	Betsey Riddle	Philadelphia, April 20, 1876.
Fitz	Susie J. Chase	Salem, Mass., Feb. 13, 1878.
Francis	Minnie Field Worsley	—— ——, June 20, 1883.
Frothingham	Lucy Jandon Harris	Philadelphia, May 22, 1888.
Fuller	Ella J. Sherman	Wayland, Mass., Nov. 2, 1871.
Galloway	Henrietta Osteritter	—— Jan. 5, 1884.
Gannett	Edith Frances Bates	—— Dec. 18, 1873.
*Godon	—— ——	—— ——
Greener	Genevieve Ida Fleet	Washington, D. C., Sept. 24, 1874.
Groesbeck	Elizabeth Perry	Cincinnati, O., Nov. 5, 1872.
Hale	Harriet Knowles Swinburne	Newport, R. I., 1883.
*Healy	Alice Hale Bird	Brookline, Mass., Sept. 26, 1877.
Hill	Caroline Ella Manning	Rockland, Me., Dec. 24, 1892.
Holmes	*Elizabeth J. Allen	Boston, Nov. 6, 1875.
Holmes	Lillian Stokes	New York, May 20, 1880.
Holway	Maria M. Rich	Boston, Nov. 28, 1867.
*Horton	Marian Glyde Bigelow	Boston, Nov. 25, 1873.
Huntress	Elizabeth Eaglesham	Lowell, Sept. 13, 1881.
Jordan	Helen L. Stevens	Boston, June 18, 1873.
Kettell	Fanny Russell Hawes	Worcester, June 1, 1886.
Ladd	Ella Cora Brooks	Milton, Mass., Nov. 16, 1878.
Lawrence	*Emily Fairfax Silsbee	Salem, Mass., June 1, 1871.
Lawrence	Gertrude M. Rice	Groton, Mass., June 12, 1900.
Lincoln	Fanny Chandler	Worcester, Mass., June 24, 1873.
Littlefield	Georgiana Stevens	Somerville, Mass., June 29, 1874.
*Low	Mary L. Ide	Brooklyn, N. Y., June 6, 1878.
Lunt	Caroline K. Isaacs	Chicago, Ill., Sept. 3, 1874.
*McCall	Phebe Warren Ingersoll	Philadelphia, Oct. 1, 1878.
McMichael	Anna Mallet Prevost	Philadelphia, June 7, 1877.

Mann	Louisa C. F. van de Sande	Cambridge, July 12, 1878.
*Mitchell	*Mary E. Holmes	——— ———, June 17, 1879.
*Mitchell	May Suter	——— ———, Jan. 5, 1887.
Monroe	Ella Chartis Hadley	Lawrence, Kans., March 18, 1880.
Morison	Priscilla Ridgely White	Baltimore, Md., Oct. 31, 1871.
Norcross	Susannah Ruggles Plympton	Boston, Jan. 20, 1881.
Nourse	Edith Francis Riversmith	——— ———, Sept. 12, 1878.
Parkman	Mary Frances Parker	Newark, N. J., Aug. 21, 1890.
Parsons	*Mary Mason Oliver	——— ———, Aug. 15, 1895.
Pearson	*Jessie Patton	——— ———, Oct. 14, 1875.
Pearson	Helen Hester Hume	Houlton, Me., Nov. 15, 1892.
Pendleton	*Sarah Marié	New York, June 24, 1885.
Pendleton	Elizabeth La Montagne	——— ———, Dec., 1890.
*Perkins	Mary Longworth Stettinius	Cincinnati, May 10, 1887.
Perrin	L. Nellie Denton	West Newton, Mass., April 12, 1876.
Rawson	Clara Hobart	New York, June 5, 1879.
Robinson, F. W.	Ada Byron O'Neal	Kirkwood, Mo., Aug. 19, 1874.
Rodman	Harriet D. Risley	Washington, Oct. 31, 1872.
Rotch	Helen Rotch	New Bedford, Mass., June 4, 1874.
Sanger	Victoria Anne Garrette	Ipswich, Mass., Oct. 1, 1891.
Sargent, J.	Nellie Louise McClure	New York, Dec. 5, 1872.
*Sargent, L. M.	Marian Appleton Coolidge	Boston, Nov. 16, 1876.
Scudder	*Caroline Townsend	Albany, April 11, 1888.
Seavey	Annie E. Patterson	Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 3, 1874.
Sheldon	May L. Firth	Boston, June 5, 1880.
Shepard	*Sarah Elizabeth Austin	Reading, Mass., Dec. 15, 1875.
Shepard	Mary Adeline Faught	——— ———, Nov. 22, 1897.
Sherman	Sarah A. Winsor	Boston, Sept. 20, 1881.
Smith, S. S.	*Katharine V. Toffey	Cambridge, Mass., June 3, 1873.
Smith, S. S.	Edith Cornell	——— ———, July 1, 1886.
Smith, W. B.	Helen Elizabeth Morey	Buffalo, N. Y., June 20, 1874.
Soley	Mary Woolsey Howland	New York, Dec. 1, 1875.
Soule	Ida Helen Whittemore	Brookline, Mass., April 13, 1882.
Spackman	Margaret Livingston Swift	——— ———, Nov. 18, 1875.
*Spalding, C. P.	Caroline G. Livingston	——— ———, Sept. 24, 1883.
Spaulding, H. K.	Eunice Adaline Ladd	Lowell, Mass., Dec. 27, 1883.
Swan	Caroline Metcalf Nazro	Dorchester, Nov. 6, 1884.
Taft	Mary Eliot Holbrook	Watertown, Mass., Oct. 23, 1873.
*Thayer	Alice Robeson	Boston, Nov. 2, 1870.
Ticknor	Florence Elizabeth Harris	Boston, Jan. 10, 1894.
Tuckerman	Clara L. Fargis	New York, Dec. 10, 1879.
Vaughan	Ellen Twisleton Parkman	Boston, Oct. 16, 1882.
Viaux	Florence Ballou Farrar	Boston, June 18, 1873.
Wait	Anna J. Dolloff	Exeter, N. H., Aug. 12, 1873.
Walcott	*Florence Keyes	Concord, Mass., Sept. 22, 1875.
Walcott	Jessie McDermott	Washington, D. C., July 21, 1891.
Wells	Emma C. Morse	Rising Sun, Ind., May 22, 1872.
Wharton	*Fanny Pickman	Beverly, Mass., Oct. 31, 1877.
Wharton	Susan C. Lay	Washington, D. C., Feb. 10, 1891.
White	Georgie A. Read	Boston, Feb. 28, 1871.
Wilby	Harriet Elizabeth Mitchell	Cincinnati, Ohio, June 3, 1879.
Willis	Mary Baker Haydock	New York, Oct. 24, 1874.
Wolcott	Edith Prescott	Boston, Sept. 2, 1874.
Woodard	Carrie Varney	Bangor, Oct. 8, 1872.
Worcester	Emma A. Hoe	New York, Dec. 7, 1880.

DEATHS.

Adams, George Huntington	April 8, 1900.
Andrews, Henry Chandler	Aug. 20, 1897.
Brown, Samuel Emmons	Aug. 5, 1877.
Crosby, William Sage	April 6, 1875.
Davis, Frank Dupont	June, 1879.
Dexter, S. Newton	Feb. 21, 1899.
Evans, Andrew Otis	Sept., 1879.
Godon, Frederic William	Sept. 22, 1876.
Greene, Samuel Fay	Oct. 16, 1877.
Healy, Joseph	April 18, 1880.
Hinckley, Thomas Leslie	Nov. 1, 1875.
Horton, Henry Kenny	Dec. 15, 1877.
Loring, Fred Wadsworth	Nov. 5, 1871.
Low, Ethelbert Mills	July 29, 1881.
Lowell, Perceval	Dec. 9, 1887.
McCall, Harry Wilcocks	June 18, 1894.
Merrick, William	Jan. 17, 1887.
Mitchell, Charles Lucius	June 21, 1898.
Perkins, James Handasyd	Dec. 2, 1889.
Sargent, Lucius Manlius	Nov. 14, 1893.
Spalding, Charles Parker	March 25, 1895.
Swaim, Roger Williams	April 1, 1872.
Thayer, Stephen Van Rensselaer	Oct. 10, 1871.

OCCUPATIONS.

Law	36
Business	31
Teaching	10
Engineering	6
Medicine	6
Farming	2
Ministry	2
Science	2
Architecture	1
Literature	2
Artist	1
Civil Service	1
Public Service	1
Uncertain	2
No occupation	5
	108

Dr. THOMAS B. TICKNOR, Secretary, in account with THE CLASS OF 1870. Cr.

1895.			1900.
June 1.	To balance on hand	$3566.53	June 1.	Class Dinner of 1895	$402.50
1900.				Commencement Expenses from June 1, 1895, to date	279.08
June 1.	Interest on investments and bank deposits from June 1, 1895, to date	783.80		Printing Sixth Report	131.91
	Subscription	100.00		Class Photographs	66.00
	Sale of Class Photographs	65.05		Advertising	17.26
				Account of Seventh Report	10.00
				Postage	6.97
					963.66
	E. & O. E.			Balance forward	3551.72
		$4515.38			$4515.38

The Balance ($3551.72) on above condensed statement includes one Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis Consolidated Mortgage Bond, and one Fitchburg R. R. 4 % Bond; — par value $2,000. Cash on hand and in bank $1,551.72.